Plan to Let 100 Pry Bills From Rules Unit Studied

Scheme Would Force Release of Measures On Special Petition, Break Bottleneck

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A change in House rules to permit as few as 100 members to force any regularly reported bill out of the Rules Committee by signing a special discharge petition was in prospect last night.

The plan hasn't yet received formal leadership blessing but enough Democrats were reportedly lined up behind it to assure adoption, either when the curtain rises on the new Congress Monday or by separate action later.

Designed to break any possible Rules Committee bottleneck of Truman measures, the plan was described as a "leadership weapon" strong enough to clear any party-programmed bill to the floor.

One proponent said the mere change in rules may be sufficient to avert any future Rules Committee blockade, without frequent use of the new discharge procedure.

Existing Method Stands

The plan will not disturb the existing method of shaking bills loose from the regular legislative committee on petition of a 218-member majority, but would supplement it.

The new procedure would come into play if any standing House committee favorably reported legislation, and the Rules group refused to clear it to the floor.

After a waiting period of about two weeks, the chairman of the legislative committee could file a petition to "discharge" the Rules Committee. Under the present plan, 100 signatures would be enough to bring it to the floor, but the number of signatures required may be hiked to 118 or even as high as 150.

As lame ducks and new members flocked into town to attend the closing session of the Eightieth Congress Friday and the opening of the new Congress Monday, House organization problems continued to hold the spotlight.

Caucus on Saturday

House talks revolved around Speaker-to-be Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), secure in the House Democratic saddle.

At a press conference, Rayburn declined to disclose organization shifts in the works, leaving the formal decisions up to a House Democratic caucus Saturday.

"I think we are going to get along pretty well," Rayburn told newsmen. "I think the vast majority of Congress is going to feel we have been called on to do something for the country."

Rayburn's first organization move was believed aimed at filling the six Democratic vacancies on the House Ways and Means Committee with Democrats sufficiently liberal in character to support all of the programmed Administration bills. Since Ways and Means Democrats parcel out Democratic posts on all other House committees, elections to it, by Saturday's caucus, would determine the desired progressive complexion of all other House committees.

CIO Pays "Respects"

A delegation of CIO officials, led by President Philip Murray, called on Rayburn to "pay their respects." They reportedly did more—opposed assignment to the Ways and Means group of any Democrat who voted for the Taft-Hartley law.

Rayburn told newsmen no leadership determinations have been made on the future status of the House Un-American Activities Committee, under attack by Americans for Democratic Action and other progressive elements in the party.

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) has announced he will move on opening day to abolish the committee. So far as could be learned, he does not have leadership backing. Representative Chet

Truman Grins After 40-Min. Landing Delay

Anxious Officials Wait As Independence Circles Airport Here in Fog

President Truman was calm but his friends were on edge yesterday while his plane circled through fog and drizzling rain above National Airport for more than 40 minutes.

When the White House plane, the Independence, landed safely, Mr. Truman stepped jauntily down and grinned as newsmen asked whether he had been worried up there.

"Oh, my goodness, no!" Mr. Truman chuckled. "I've been reading and sleeping most of the time."

His associates on the ground, however, were more than a little worried. Cabinet members, Government officials, reporters and others stared anxiously through the dense curtain of mist as the Independence, due at 2:25 p. m., droned through the soupy skies.

In the tense 40 minutes before the plane's wheels met the runway, a crossfire of radio conversation crackled between the presidential pilot, Lieut. Col. Francis (Frenchy) Williams, and the airport control tower.

Radar guided in the "Independence" for its landing. Stanley Seltzer, control tower chief at the airport, said that radar guidance was used from the 2500-foot level until the plane was close to the runway.

The landing was made through the ground control approach system, which employs two radar screens. Operators can watch the elevation of the plane through one screen and make "left-or-right" approach correction by observing the plane on the second screen.

Tower officials expressed surprise at the interest created by the incident. "They come in that way every day in this weather," said one control operator.

Even when the presidential DC-6 started taxiing to the Military Air Transport Service terminal, the crowd of some 100 persons could not make it out through the murk. Then the blue-and-silver ship appeared, and Mr. Truman emerged smiling and carrying several books under his arm.

He said he'd been reading and drowsing while the Independence waited its turn behind three earlier commercial flights to come down through the rain and fog.

The Independence had reported it was over Mount Vernon, Va., 9.1 air miles south of Washington's

Work To Go On Well Into '50

White House Repairs Uncover Faults Worse Than Expected

The condition of the White House is "much worse than expected," Architect Lorenzo Winslow revealed yesterday.

As a result, the cost of repairs will "considerably" exceed the original estimate of from $750,000 to $1,250,000. President Truman and his family will remain in the Blair House until "well into" 1950, months longer than the original estimate.

Winslow's statement followed yesterday's discovery that the interior walls of the mansion, from 30 to 42 inches wide and two stories high, were not supported by footings or foundations.

In effect, Winslow said, these heavy brick walls have been sinking within the building into soft earth, cracking plaster and bending floors as they sank.

Winslow discovered what he described as "this tragic condition," after spending a day ripping plaster from the inside walls to find the bricks badly cracked and broken away, and entire walls leaning toward the center of the building.

To remedy the condition, Winslow said, these interior walls must be torn down, foundations laid to a depth of possibly 20 feet, and the walls rebuilt.

More than 5000 square feet of interior walls will have to be completely reconstructed, he estimated.

Previously, Winslow had said the entire second floor would be rebuilt. Yesterday, in addition to adding the interior walls, Winslow said all chimneys below the top floor will also have to be ripped out and rebuilt.

The roof, constructed in 1927 of concrete and steel, is in perfect condition, he said, as is the basement floor. No termites have been found. "At least we got rid of them during the war," he said.

Winslow said no architect today would construct heavy buildings without foundations to support heavy inner walls as well as the conventional foundations supporting the sides of a building.

The White House architect said he had also discovered in the exterior walls several "sprawlings," where beneath the plaster the brick has cracked and peeled as a result of the fire of 1814. This damage, he described as "minor."

Meanwhile, the Public Buildings Administration revealed yesterday it had retained the firm of Spencer, White & Prentiss, New York foundation engineers, to study the problem created by the lack of interior foundations.

Representatives of the firm were at the White House yesterday and in conference with Winslow.

Census Reports Year's Growth Makes Population 148 Million

The population of the United States reached an all-time high of about 148 million at the close of 1948, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. The increase during the year was around three million.

In a further year-end summary of vital statistics for 1948 the bureau said:

The civilian labor force—everyone working or looking for work—reached 63,842,000 in July. That was the highest total in the Nation's history.

Employment in nonfarming industries alone reached 51,932,000 in November, topping the wartime peak of December, 1942, by more than 5,600,000. There were 255,000 industrial concerns.

Married couples numbered nearly 35 million. Married women workers outnumbered single women workers by 8,300,000 to 5,900,000.

Median age of family heads was 45 years; married family heads averaging about 44 years and heads of other families about 54 years.

More than three million families lived "doubled up" with other families, about 2.7 million as "subfamilies" related to the head of the household, and nearly half a million as "secondary families," such as lodgers and servant groups, not related to the household head.

Woman Patient 'Holding Own'

Wrong Lung Partly Collapsed In Operation at Glenn Dale

Through a "very unfortunate mistake," doctors partially collapsed the good right lung instead of the tubercular left lung of a middle-aged woman in an operation at Glenn Dale Tuesday, it was revealed last night.

The victim, whose name was withheld, was reported in "serious" condition but holding her own.

Commissioner Guy Mason made the disclosure and called Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, for an immediate preliminary report which indicated that:

1. The operative schedule for the patient "erroneously listed the operation for the right side instead of the left side." She was suffering from a "very serious involvement" of the left lung.

2. Chest X-rays of the patient, however, were in the operating room at the time of the operation.

Dr. Ruhland's report states that the operation was actually performed by Dr. Frank Ashburn, a private surgeon here who formerly worked at Mayo Clinic and saw service in the Army Medical Corps.

The mistake occurred after "a series of almost inconceivable events," Dr. Ashburn said last night. The operation was on the schedule for a week, he said, and the schedule was seen by many persons, none of whom noticed the error.

"There is really nothing to hide," Dr. Ashburn said, although he feared the effects of the publicity on the hospital.

Injunction Asked Against CAA

Segregation Ban at Airport To Face Court Test Monday

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A showdown on the Civil Aeronautics Administration's order banning segregation at National Airport will begin Monday in the United States District Court at Alexandria.

Airport Terminal Services, Inc., which operates food commissions at the airport and has challenged legality of the CAA segregation ban, yesterday requested a Federal injunction to prevent CAA from enforcing its order.

Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan, at 3 p. m. yesterday, signed an order which directs CAA Administrator D. W. Rentzel and George H. Humrickhouse, United States attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, to appear in Alexandria court at 10 a. m. Monday and "show cause" why such a preliminary injunction should not be issued.

Frederick J. Ball, vice president and general counsel of ATS, said Judge Bryan's action assures ATS "a hearing on the issues, even if Judge Bryan decides not to issue the preliminary injunction we ask."

Rentzel issued the segregation order on Monday. It prohibits segregation or discrimination on grounds of race, creed or color for any of the airport facilities.

ATS operates all the food-dispensing facilities at National Airport. There are separate eating places for whites and Negroes.

Ball said the reason for including Humrickhouse in the "show cause" action is that "he is the one who would have to enforce the order, acting for the Justice Department."

In issuing the order, Rentzel stated that while it was previously believed that Virginia's segregation laws applied to the airport, and congressional legislation would be required to alter this situation, ". . . the Department of Justice now has advised that the administrator has ample statutory authority to issue this regulation without new legislation."

In a five-page legal discussion of this section by CAA, Ball said the effect of the order would be to force ATS to violate both the Federal Criminal Code and Virginia's segregation statutes.

Basis for this contention, said ATS, is that the criminal code makes applicable to areas such as National Airport the offenses

Chiang Calls Top Generals To Nanking

Decisive Step May Come From Meeting But Signs Point To Continuing War

Nanking, Dec. 29 (AP).—China's highest military commanders were summoned to Nanking by Chiang Kai-shek today, probably to settle the issue of whether to fight or to sue for peace with the Communists.

There were these two hints that after a meeting Thursday the decision may be to fight on.

1. Always in black days Chiang has called in his generals to rally their fighting spirit.

2. Gen. Chen Cheng was told to take over from civilian Wei Tao-ming the governorship of Formosa—the island province being converted into a fortress off the southeast coast of the Chinese mainland.

On the side of possible peace overtures were two factors:

1. Reliable reports say Vice President Li Tsung-jen will attend the military conference. He is mentioned as becoming President for negotiations with the Reds, if Chiang steps down.

2. Gen. Chang Chih-chung, one of the few high Chinese not on the Communist "war criminal" list, will attend. He is a moderate often mentioned in peace rumors. He commands Chiang's headquarters in northwest China, far from the scene of the civil war fighting.

Roll Call of Generals

Others reported already in Nanking or en route by plane are:

Gen. Fu Tso-yi, commander in north China, whose armies are penned up in Peiping and Tientsin.

Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, commander at Hankow in central China, whose armies are among the few good ones left to Chiang.

Gen. Hu Tsung-nan, commander at Sian in north central China, whose armies also are cut off from Nanking supplies except by air.

Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, warlord governor of encircled Tayuan in north China, who told newsmen on his arrival, "I'd rather die than surrender."

Gen. Ma Hung-kwei, governor of Ningsia Province in the far north adjoining Outer Mongolia. General Ma is largely independent, but his hard-riding cavalry reportedly has intervened in the civil war occasionally on the side of the government.

(The Communists some time ago named Ma as one of those who were working to get Chiang to quit.)

Gen. Lu Han, governor of Yunan Province in China's southwest on the road to Burma and India.

Soong Attends

T. V. Soong, governor of Kwangtung Province in south China. In any finish fight, the government would be expected to make a stand in Kwangtung.

One source described the scheduled military meeting as a "roll call" of the generals to determine the feasibility of continuing the civil war.

A spokesman for the Nanking garrison said a "Communist underground" had been found operating only 2 miles outside the capital.

In the north, government headquarters at Peiping said renewed Communist attacks on Tangku, Tientsin's seaport, were "crushed."

Defense Law Changes To Strengthen Control Urged by Forrestal

Admits Unification Disagreements; Sees U. S. Less Vulnerable, Militarily 'Sound'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary James Forrestal reported yesterday that the United States is stronger militarily than a year or more ago, but that additional efforts and perhaps some degree of austerity in American life are necessary for national security.

He recommended a program of military aid to non-Communist Europe, declaring it necessary even though the cost "may necessitate hard decisions by our people."

Legislation providing for such assistance, said the defense chief, should not be confined to Europe, "as it is impossible to anticipate just what part of the world will require military assistance from the United States."

In his first report as defense chief, Forrestal also urged major changes in the armed forces Unification Act to strengthen his control over the Army, Navy and Air Force. They largely agree with the proposals of the Eberstadt sub-committee of the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization, published earlier this month.

The Secretary of Defense answered critics of lack of unification among the services with a listing of accomplishments and programs which promise further results.

Many Disagreements

But he made no bones of the fact that there have been "many arguments and disagreements" and that "there are still great areas in which the viewpoints of the services have not come together."

Such disagreements, said Forrestal, result from honest and natural approaches to the common end by the men of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

"These differences," he added, "are being resolved."

Rejecting proposals that the way to end them is the appointment of a single military head of the armed forces, he declared that decisions on national security questions "will come far better from a group reflecting varying experience than from any single arbitrary source."

In backing military aid to western Europe, Forrestal said that a vast program need not be started immediately. Rather, by launching a "modest" program, we will show our intentions and bolster the "confidence and hope of Europe."

The Defense Secretary warned that due to shortages in raw materials and the "tight" condition of American economy, we must keep military and civil requirements within "proper relations," lest our free economy be threatened.

However, he added, "it may be necessary to accept some denials in our accustomed standards if we are to achieve a state of readiness which to me seems indicated by the uncertain state of the world."

Forrestal said he was able to report that the Nation is "less vulnerable" today than in September, 1947, when he became the first head of the unified services. The state of the national military establishment, he declared, is "sound."

State of Preparedness

Backing up this statement, he declared that the armed forces have more men and equipment and that their combat readiness has been improved. And "so far as can be determined by the Research and Development Board," Forrestal reported, "the United States is maintaining a fair margin of superiority in virtually every technical area of weapon development."

The defense chief also mentioned that there has been "appreciable progress in the development of im-

Beyond Pull of Gravity

Man-Made Space Satellites Studied for U. S. Military Use

American scientists are considering the feasibility of creating man-made satellites which would operate in outer space as a part of this Nation's military machine.

Disclosure of such a Buck Rogerish plan was made in a cryptic reference in the annual report of the Research and Development Board of the National Military Establishment. The board mentioned progress in the "Earth Satellite Vehicle Program," without elaboration.

Just what part such a project would play in war, other than as a part of the guided missiles research program, was not explained officially.

Unofficially, however, there were suggestions it involved launching rockets containing radio receivers and transmitters and other instruments far into space beyond the pull of earth's gravity.

One theory was that such a rocket would revolve about the earth, perhaps held in place by the neutralization of the earth's gravity by the gravity of the moon. It was estimated that this might be between eight-tenths and nine-tenths of the distance to the moon. Estimates of the moon's distance range from about 238,00 to 252,000 miles.

The instrument-equipped satellite might be used for controlling long-range guided missiles—perhaps equipped with an atomic warhead—halfway across the earth.

Chief difficulty at present in devising an intercontinental missile is guidance. Radar beams can track and control such rockets, but the range of radar is limited to the horizon. But if a radio or radar receiver and transmitter were installed in a artificial satellite, the missile could ride a beam to a fixed

U. N. Orders Jews to Quit Negev Desert

Cease-Fire Demand on Both Sides Hits Israel Most Because of Gains

Paris, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—With the United States abstaining, the United Nations Security Council today ordered Arabs and Jews to cease fire in the Negev and withdraw to the November 4 truce lines. Both sides were told to begin armistice negotiations at once.

The British resolution struck chiefly at Israel since the truce lines barred the Jews from southern Palestine's Negev Desert. Most of the fighting has occurred near Gaza, site of the Arab provisional government, and near Rafa, also in territory allotted the Arabs.

Britain's Harold Beeley caused a sensation when he announced that Jewish forces had invaded Egypt and penetrated to within 6½ miles of El Arish, coastal town on the Sinai Peninsula, 15 miles from the border.

British Pact Involved

The question was immediately raised as to whether Egypt would invoke or Britain honor their 1936 military pact which binds either one to come to the aid of the other in event of war.

In London a Foreign Office spokesman said "the invasion" was by an armed patrol whose commander was either foolhardy or mistaken. He said Britain at least had no intention of invoking the "aid" clause.

The resolution was adopted 8 to 0, with the United States, the Soviet Union and the Ukraine abstaining. Both Russia and the Ukraine, however, voted for the cease-fire part.

The United States, which frequently has chided the Russians for awaiting Kremlin instructions, apparently did not vote because orders were not received from Washington, a spokesman said.

Report Is Ordered

The Council's resolution ordered its Special Palestine Committee to report on compliance January 7 at Lake Success.

Today's U. N. resolution repeated the cease fire and troop withdrawal order of November 4 and, by French amendment, reiterated the November 16 order for armistice discussions under the U. N.

It asked Arabs and Jews "to allow and facilitate complete supervision of the truce by United Nations observers."

Java Fighting To End Jan. 1, Dutch Assert

U. S. Delegate Interprets Action as Defiance Of United Nations

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Netherlands told the United Nations Security Council today it would stop fighting in Java by midnight, New Year's Eve, and in Sumatra two or three days later.

Several delegates, including Philip C. Jessup of the United States, immediately interpreted the Dutch action as defiance of the United Nations.

Dutch delegate Jan Herman van Royen replied to yesterday's Security Council order giving the Dutch 24 hours to release captive Indonesian republican leaders. The order also called for a consular report on compliance with its Christmas Eve cease-fire order.

Reply Is Qualified

Van Royen said Indonesian leaders would be freed if they promised not to endanger "public security."

Van Royen's answer was given just an hour after the 24-hour deadline.

Several delegates charged the Dutch refused to comply with the council's order, but no specific action was attempted.

Syria's delegate, Faris El Khouri, said it seemed Holland had asked her generals "How soon do you think it will be finished" and gave their reply as the date for the end of operations against the Indonesians.

Russian Hits Dutch

Russian Delegate Jacob A. Malik termed the Dutch reply "a cynical request by the aggressor for two or three days more to kill off its victim completely."

Jessup said Van Royen's reply did not show compliance. Although it was unsatisfactory, he added, an announcement by Van Royen that Prime Minister William Drees of the Netherlands would visit Indonesia showed his government took the Council's resolutions seriously.

Van Royen said hostilities in Java "are in the course of being terminated" and "in any event" would terminate "at the latest" by midnight Friday, December 31.

Predated Checks Help Give Democrats $100,000 Surplus

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The Democrats have come out of the 1948 campaign with a treasury surplus of about $100,000, thanks in part to a flood of predated checks.

They are still chuckling about these belated contributions at Democratic national headquarters.

One contributor, grabbing desperately for the Truman bandwagon after it had crossed the finish line, called up headquarters about ten days after the November 2 election.

"I wrote you out a check on October 25," he said, a note of excitement in his voice. "It's just come back. I can't understand what happened. I just wanted you to know that I am sending it in again."

Others who sent in predated checks after the election didn't have the gall to go that far in their deceit. They just put an October date on the checks, and sent them in without bothering to explain why the postmark on the envelope was so much later.

Who were these tardy check-writers? Most of them, according to the story told at national headquarters, were not office-holders, but Democrats of long standing who had guessed wrong about President Truman's chances and wanted to do something for their conscience and self respect.

Altogether the predated checks brought in about $50,000.

This, together with money raised

Surrender In Bataan Held Unauthorized

Seattle, Dec. 29 (AP).—An Army historian reported here today that American troops on Bataan were surrendered in 1942 in violation of specific orders from Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright.

Louis Morton, chief of the Pacific section of the Department of the Army's historical division, described his report as the first official disclosure of the Bataan surrender details. He said his reported were compiled from military files that were formerly labeled "top secret." Morton spoke before the Pacific Coast branch of the American Historical Association.

Morton also described confusion resulting from refusal of many commanders to accept Wainwright's later surrender order in other Philippine islands until they were convinced that the lives of the Bataan and Corregidor prisoners hung upon their compliance. Even then some Americans and many Filipinos fled into the hills to become guerillas.

Morton told this story of the Bataan surrender against high command orders:

When the Japanese broke the Bataan defenses April 3, 1942, Lieut. Gen. Edward P. King, jr., commander of the Bataan forces under Wainwright, asked what he should do. Wainwright, whose headquarters were on Corregidor, was under orders from Washington "not to surrender under any circumstances." He told King to counterattack.

King's opinion was that the Bataan position was hopeless. He surrendered April 9. Morton said King reported he didn't inform Wainwright of his intentions "to avoid embarrassing Wainwright and to avoid difficulties over orders."

Morton also reported a confict between orders issued from Australia by General MacArthur and from Corregidor by Wainwright.

He said Wainwright, prior to his own surrender, instructed Maj. Gen. William F. Sharp, commander of troops on central and southern islands, to revert to General MacArthur's command. He figured that would take them out from under his own surrender on Corregidor and leave them freedom of action.

The Japanese command refused to accept Wainwright's surrender on those terms.

In the meantime, Sharp had reported to MacArthur and was ordered to break up his command. Sharp complied. That policy was to make all commands in surrounding islands independent and in position for guerilla warfare.

It was after those orders from MacArthur, said Morton, that Wainwright instructed Sharp to surrender all the island forces under him, in the hope of avoiding disaster for the thousands of Bataan and Corregidor prisoners.

Sharp, fearing annihilation of the prisoners, agreed after an emissary was sent to him. But by that time his own subordinate commanders were out of hand, and special emissaries had to be sent to them.

A force on Negros Island held out strongly against surrendering, but, in the end, the American colonel in command complied although many of the Filipinos, and possibly a few Americans, under him slipped into the hills to become guerillas.

wright was entirely responsible for the orders he received not to surrender "but I am not sure about that."

'Completely Incorrect,' Gen. Wainwright Says

By The Associated Press

In San Antonio, Tex., last night, General Wainwright said the historian's statement that Wainwright ordered a counterattack after the American lines were broken "is completely incorrect."

Wainwright said he would be at his office in San Antonio Thursday morning to meet any representatives of the press to start an investigation into the story.

Gen. King Calls Story 'Generally Correct'

Sea Island, Ga., Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Retired Gen. Edward P. King tonight described an Army historian's report that he ignored a command not to surrender Bataan as "not correct in detail, but generally correct."

King said he was not ordered specifically either to surrender or not to surrender but to "take action which was not entirely inconsistent with surrender."

He added that he doubted whether Gen. Jonathan Wain-

Aid Requests To Be Lower

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP).—The nations and areas receiving European Recovery Program aid decided today to ask for approximately $4,300,000,000 for the year 1949-50. This would be about 700 million dollars less than they needed in the first year of ERP's operation.

The figure, decided upon by the Council of Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC), represented a smaller amount than had been talked about first on the basis of individual nations' requests.

It decided that about 300 million of requests could be taken care of in intra-European trading.

U. S. Move Hinted In Yugoslav Rift

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

The United States assailed Communist moves in Hungary and China yesterday, and hinted at American action to widen the rift between Yugoslavia and the other Communist-bloc countries.

All these developments occurred at a news conference held by Undersecretary of State Lovett. Lovett told reporters:

1. General comments he has made previously on the desirability of East-West trade in Europe apply to the Yugoslav situation. Marshal Tito told Parliament at Belgrade Monday that Soviet-bloc nations had broken their trade agreements with Yugoslavia and he might have to turn Yugoslav trade to the West. Such a development has long been expected here.

2. The arrest in Communist Hungary of Roman Catholic Cardinal Mindszenty on charges of treason and the like was a sickening sham. Lovett said the charges are obviously false and are the kind of behavior typical of the Communist countries. Such behavior, he said, makes peace an exasperation rather than a reality. The cardinal's arrest, he continued, is the climax of a long series of actions against personal, human and now religious freedom.

3. "War criminal" charges made by Chinese Communists against Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and other Chinese government leaders are unthinkable. Lovett said he did not believe that these charges represent the view of the Chinese people or the people of any civilized country.

Much of his conference thus was dominated by questions bearing on developments in the cold war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He said further in response to inquiry that Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, who previously had seen President Truman and Secretary Marshall, called on him Monday. It was a business call, he said, and Mme. Chiang renewed her pleas for American aid to China's hard-pressed Nationalist government.

Lovett did not say specifically what she had asked. However, Chinese officials here have been urging a tremendous speed-up in American arms deliveries, a statement of support for Chiang, the assignment of an outstanding military figure to head an American aid mission in China and a three-year, three-billion-dollar aid program.

On still another front of the East-West struggle, Lovett told questioners that negotiations among the United States, Canada and the Western European Union countries on a North Atlantic security pact are moving along satisfactorily. The broad program has already been discussed with congressional leaders, Lovett said.

General Governs Fortress Formosa

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
GEN. CHEN CHENG, former Chinese Army chief of staff, was appointed governor of Formosa by the Executive Yuan (council) yesterday. The strategic island, off the mid-China coast, is being made into what may become the headquarters of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek if he decides to continue to battle the Communists

Hungarians Say Cardinal Was Fascist

Budapest, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Hungarian government charged today that the jailed Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty has been a "sponsor of Hungarian fascism."

The cardinal and 10 top persons of the Roman Catholic Church of Hungary were arrested Tuesday. The interior ministry said yesterday the cardinal had "confessed his guilt" to treason charges.

Czech Protestant Leaders Are Warned

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Leaders of the Protestant churches in Czechoslovakia were warned tonight "to put their ranks in order with the state."

They were accused of having "ties with the Anglo-Saxon world which is against us," even as abuse mounted against the Roman Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia.

Czech Stores Closed 10 Days In Nation-Wide Inventory

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Members of the Communist workers' militia, some armed with rifles, "helped" shopkeepers today to take the inventories of goods which the government has ordered for the year-end.

Tvery business in the country was taking inventory under a government decree which forbade the sale of everything except food, tobacco, matches, gasoline and newspapers from last Monday through January 5.

As fast as inventories were completed, economic control agents sealed the shops to make sure they remained closed until January 6.

Reports from the provinces told of widespread searches of houses for hoarded food, textiles and other goods.

Speculation as to the purpose of the stocktaking ranged from guesses that private firms and land were to be nationalized to reports the government might be preparing some kind of double price system.

IOU a Day Keeps Doctor Away

Tokyo, Japan, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Inflation-happy Japanese are flocking to the new religion of "the honorable water god" that allows the believer to "mortgage" his sickness. The sickness is "cured" when the water god obligingly forecloses the mortgage.

The sign outside the religious shrine dedicated to Omizugami Sama, "the honorable water god," reads: "Mortgage your sickness and borrow money."

"Of course," a guide pointed out, "the sick man doesn't really get any money."

In a cabinet before the shrine are wads of IOU's written by believers.

One of the notes said: "I hereby place my neuralgia as collateral for the above sum of 1000 yen to be paid back by the last day of December of this year. In the event I am unable to pay back this sum, I agree you may confiscate my neuralgia. December 15, 1948.

When the ailing believer fails to pay back the money he has thus "borrowed," the water god demands the collateral—the believer's illness.

Yugoslavs Cancel Some Orders for Czech Machinery

Belgrade, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Yugoslavia has canceled some of its orders for the import of "installations and machinery" from Czechoslovakia, Franc Leskoshek, Yugoslav Minister of Heavy Industry announced last night.

The Yugoslav government is purchasing the equipment "from other countries," he said, because the Czechs imposed such long delays in deliveries.

The minister said that even before the Tito-Cominform split the Poles fell down on deliveries early this year.

Leskoshek supported Marshal Tito's charges that trade between the Communist countries has not been conducted on an altruistic basis but rather in a cut-throat manner which was as bad as the way the capitalists do business. He said the Hungarians were trying to charge the Yugoslavs 40 per cent more than the international market price for electrical ovens.

Big Cairo University Closed To Discourage Student Riots

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
IN ARMS OF LAW—Abdel Hamid Ahmed Hassan (right), a veterinary college student, is held after his arrest in Cairo for the assassination of Egypt's premier.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Premier Ibrahim Abdel Hadi Pasha closed the big Fuad University here for an indefinite period today in order to discourage student riots following the assassination of Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha.

There had been no sign of disorder since Nokrashy was slain yesterday by a student members of the outlawed extremist Moslem Brotherhood.

Hadi announced he would intensify the campaign against terrorism.

More than 70,000 persons watched the state funeral of Nokrashy this morning.

Iraqui Students Demand Resumption of War

Baghdad, Iraq, Dec. 29 (AP).—Student demonstrators for the second day demanded that war be resumed in Palestine.

Premier Muzahim Amin al Pachachi today told the students "Our victorious armies are engaged in continuous war with the enemy. I believe war is the only means to save Palestine."

(In Cairo, Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, Secretary General of the Arab League, told reporters tonight Iraqui troops have been ordered to join the Egyptians in Palestine fighting.)

Barkley Sees No Red Coups

Paris, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley, homeward bound for "the final groan of the Eightieth Congress," said today, "I have seen no evidence" of the Communists seizing power in France or Italy during the coming year.

Both political and economic conditions were improving throughout western Europe, and the Marshall Plan was working and improving the chances of stability, the Senator from Kentucky said.

Asked if he thought western European stability could do more than hold its own and "roll back" communism from its present continental strongholds, Barkley replied "Economics affects politics; the more stable becomes economy, the more calculated it is to stop the encroachments of communism—and also roll it back."

Senator Barkley was winding up an eight-day visit to Belgium, France and western Germany tonight, when he was to take a plane for Washington. He said the At-

'Charming' Stalin Also 'Very Rude'

England, Dec. 29 (AP).—Walter Bedell Smith said tonight Prime Minister Stalin has "a charming personality when he chooses to assert it."

But, added the U. S. Ambassador to Russia, he can also be "very rude when he likes."

Smith is en route to Washington from Moscow. He told newsmen earlier today that he expects President Truman to accept his resignation as Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Greeks Repulse Guerilla Attack

Athens, Greece, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Government troops have repulsed a strong guerilla attack on Mount Bikovic, a defense bastion before Kastoria in northwestern Greece, it was announced today.

Greek press reports said more than 3000 civilians have been arrested in Peloponnesus on charges of aiding Communists.

Indonese Plan Hit-Run War

Batavia, Java, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—In an appeal over the clandestine Republican radio, Major General Tomo, leader of Indonesian suicide troops, asked the population today to strike against the Dutch in hit-and-run raids.

Tomo warned that unless the United Nations Security Council takes effective action, guerilla warfare will erupt throughout the East Indies islands. His appeal came two days after a similar one by Major General Sungkono, commander of Indonesians in east Java.

The broadcast declared the Dutch had seized only Java's major cities, leaving the countryside in control of rebel bands. It claimed the Republican army had withdrawn with all its equipment intact into the jungles and mountains.

The Dutch admitted guerillas had raided a military post near Tjiturug, about 50 miles south of Batavia. A tea factory was destroyed and barracks set afire.

The communique also reported nightly skirmishes around Jogjakarta, Republican capital, Surakarta and Magelang.

Surakarta, Indonesia's second largest city, suffered considerable damage, it was reported.

Aneta said retreating Republicans had destroyed the city's electric, water, gas, telephone and railway facilites. All shops in Surakarta were closed, the news agency reported.

Barbirolli Keeps Old Job

Manchester, England, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—John Barbirolli, former conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony, decided today to keep his $40,000 a year job with the Halle orchestra rather than take over the British Broadcasting Corporation Symphony, which is generally considered to be Britain's premier conducting assignment.

Writer Says Stalin Seeks Softer Policy

London, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—A Daily Mail Stockholm dispatch reported today that four Russian leaders, including Premier Josef Stalin, favored a change in policy to get better relations with the United States and other western powers.

Stalin

The Daily Mail dispatch was a follow-up to President Truman's statement in Kansas City Monday that certain Russian leaders "are exceedingly anxious to have an understanding with us."

It purported to analyze "a battle for power in the 14-man Politburo (the political bureau of the Communist Party which rules Russia) which has been going on for months."

"At least four men are believed to be in the bloc which seeks to switch Russia's future policy through channels of diplomacy and propaganda," the Daily Mail said.

Named as the four who sought better relations were Stalin, Foreign Trade Minister Anastas I. Mikoyan, Light Industry Minister A. N. Kosygin and Communist Party Central Committee Secretary Georgi M. Malenkov.

Mikoyan especially, because of his contacts with the west, probably "has advocated a political arrangement with the United States," the Daily Mail dispatch said.

Gen. Robertson Flies To London for Talks

London, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Sir Brian Robertson, British military governor in Germany, flew to London from Berlin today for a series of talks on the German problem. He will see Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin Thursday and return to Berlin Friday.

Robertson was understood to have come here primarily for discussions of the statute to fix the rights of the occupation powers in western Germany when a western German government is established.

He also was expected to discuss the hostile attitude of German leaders to the new Ruhr plan.

Fritz Kuhn Granted New Trial in Munich

Munich, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP).—Fritz Kuhn, former head of the German-American Bund, was granted a new trial today on his appeal from his conviction as an active Nazi. The trial was set for January 10 in Munich.

Kuhn was expelled from the United States during the war.

Leaders Agree

Pact on Ruhr Is Denounced By Germans

By Edwin Hartrich

Frankfurt, Dec. 29 (NYHT.).—The German reaction today to the new six-power agreement to internationalize the Ruhr was outspokenly angry and combative.

Western German politicians, newspapers and labor leaders were for once unanimous, saying the London agreement amounts to exploitation of a great industrial area in western Germany for the benefit of the victors. A strong and fresh vein of nationalistic sentiment was clearly evident in all the critical comments today.

There was also a recognition that the agreement as announced in London yesterday represents a definite diplomatic victory for the French, with wholesale concessions granted by the American and British governments.

Konrad Adenauer, the strong leader of western Germany's conservative Chtristian Democratic Party, declared: "This document shows the German people completely lost their sovereignty with the unconditional surrender of the Wehrmacht in 1945, and have regained nothing of it since."

Italy Knits Yugoslav, Red Trade Ties

Rome, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Italy moved in three directions today toward closer economic relations with east and west.

1. Government quarters said political and economic negotiations with Yugoslavia might develop into the strongest tie between an eastern and a western nation since the war.

2. The government authorized Russia to open its first trade offices in Italy since before the war. Russia will set up units in Rome, Genoa, Milan and Naples to permit "direct contact with Italian industrialists who wish to develop Italian-Soviet trade as foreseen under the accord recently signed in Moscow."

3. The Italian delegation working on the Italo-French Customs Union was ordered to meet at the foreign office Thursday to discuss plans for instituting "compensation taxes" as the first step toward making the union a reality. The next joint meeting with the French will be held in Paris next month.

Negotiations with Yugoslavia are being carried out simultaneously in Belgrade and Rome. They include adjustment of the border of Trieste Free Territory.

Glen Burnie Murder Trial Set January 17

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—Attorneys said today that Thomas A. Edwards' trial on charges he murdered a young Glen Burnie couple three months ago has been tentatively set for January 17 in Baltimore City Criminal Court.

Edwards has pleaded innocent to two indictments charging him with the premeditated murder of John H. Mahlan, 25, and Mary C. Kline, 18, last September. The couple was shot to death while on a date.

Forrestal Report Asks More Power proved atomic weapons" during the past year.

In a separate report, appended to Forrestal's review, the research and development board, however, admitted our intelligence reports are sketchy, and expressed "dissatisfaction" with "the rate of progress" in research.

On the credit side of the military research ledger, said the board, are the "vigorous" programs of the armed forces, and the adequate financial support given by the public and Congress.

But so far, it was stated, the board has been unable properly to unify and integrate Army, Navy and Air Force research programs. Additional control by the board over the research budgets of the three services, and a different attitude on the part of military officers assigned to the board is necessary if this is to be accomplished, it was said.

Such officers should regard themselves as "technically expert individuals" working toward an over-all objective rather than backing separate service interests, the board declared.

Forrestal's proposals for changes in the defense organization differed from the Eberstadt recommendations in one major respect. He did not urge that the right of the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force to go over his head to the President be repealed.

And the defense chief went further. He declared that he has told the Secretaries that he wants them "to feel perfectly free to express their personal views when called upon to do so by Congress."

The public and Congress, he added, are entitled to know the personal views of these officials, but should also know that such views differ from the official, "mature" conclusion of the over-all military establishment.

Forrestal's Proposals

Forrestal's proposals for greater centralization of power include:

(1) The authority of the Defense Secretary should be "materially strengthened" by changing the law to provide that he should exercise "direction, authority and control" over the services, and establish "policies and programs" for them. At present his authority is confined to "general" control and laying down "general" policies.

(2) Creation of an Undersecretary of Defense, who shall be the "alter ego" of the Secretary and Acting Secretary over the three services in his absence.

3. Remove the Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force from the National Security Council. This top level "cabinet" for military and foreign affairs is headed by the President, and consists of the four Defense Secretaries, Secretary of State and National Security Resources Board chief.

4. Give the Joint Chiefs of Staff a "responsible head," either one of the present members or a fourth person. At the same time, repeal the proviso which makes the chief of staff to the President a member of JCS. Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, now holding that post, has announced his retirement.

(5) Increase the size of the Joint Staff, now limited to 100 officers.

(6) "Clarify" the Defense Secretary's authority over personnel of the armed forces, to permit adequate staff facilities over a wide range of matters.

Forrestal made other specific recommendations for legislation. Of "highest priority," he said, are the military aid program, a housing program for the services, an unspecified method of relieving the present "critical" shortage of doctors and dentists in the armed forces, creation of a radar warning fence around the Nation, additional pay for members of the service, and a civil defense program.

In the same category, he stated, are bills to build up the reserve components, reorganize the Army, set the size of the Air Force, revise military justice and strengthen research.

He reported there is great need for additional wind tunnels—one at the Navy's Carderock, Md., model basin and others at a planned new research center.

Universal Training

Universal military training ultimately will be necessary as a means of providing men for an emergency, and should be approved whenever the draft is abandoned. This means, however, that it will not be seriously considered at the next session of Congress.

Touching on the possibilities for economy, Forrestal recalled that he had warned Congress repeatedly that no great economies would "flow automatically" from unification. He said he was convinced that substantial savings can be made, and by establishing better methods of procurement, maintenance and inventorying, vast economies can be achieved in wartime.

Answering criticism in the Eberstadt report that thousands of tanks were lost by the Army after the war and of the prevalence of "waste" throughout the services, Forrestal contended it was the result of hurried demobilization. This, he said, was everyone's fault.

Backs Three Services

Forrestal called for maintenance of a "strong Army, strong Navy and strong Air Force," rejecting suggestions we concentrate on a single weapon or force.

He said he wanted to emphasize two thoughts in his report. One, he said, had to do with ultimate security. We aim at peace, he said, and have proposed putting atomic warfare under international control. But this plan has been blocked in the United Nations by a veto.

Our possession of the A-bomb does not give us immunity from attack nor assurance of victory in case of war. With or without the atomic bomb, Forrestal declared, there can be no absolute security for anyone in the world until armed forces are regulated and peaceful methods are substituted for war in settling international disputes.

His second point hit at squabbling members of the armed forces. True unification can come only by working for a common cause, he stated.

Unification Difficulties

"The spark generated by the Unification Act," he said, "must be fanned into flame by the thoughts and actions of generals and admirals, ensigns and lieutenants, soldiers, sailors and airmen and civilians."

Unification difficulties, Forrestal stated, arise from several factors. The Navy always has relied on itself for what it needs to fight, having Marines, aviation, supply, etc., The Air Force developed as an adjunct to ground troops, but during the war swiftly turned to using air power as a separate strategic weapon.

Unfortunately, he went on, the Navy and Air Force had little opportunity to work together during the war, and few officers know much about the other service.

"Many officers of the Air Force honestly believe that the carrier will have a limited use in any war we may fight in the future, and therefore challenge the maintenance of the important carrier task forces," Forrestal said. "These misgivings are honestly held, as undoubtedly the Navy's regarding the capabilities of the long-range bomber.

Secretary's Views

"My own view is that the concept of the strategic air force has established itself as an essential part of modern warfare, although I also believe the Air Force must see to it that its tactical air remains capable of close cooperation with ground troops. I likewise hold the view that carriers and naval air will have a part to play in any war of the foreseeable future.

"The time may come when both the carrier and the long-range bomber are obsolete, but that time has not yet arrived."

Forrestal stressed the problem of combating new type schnorkel-equipped submarines as "of first importance to the Nation's security." He declared also that "there must be a clear public understanding that land forces will continue to be indispensable as a primary fighting arm," if the Army is to function properly as a member of the defense team.

Peacetime Censorship Opposed by Forrestal

Defense Secretary Forrestal said last night he agrees with a newspaper advisory group that "in peacetime no type of censorship is workable or desirable."

The group of publishers and news and radio executives was appointed early this year.

Forrestal expressed his view about censorship in his first annual report. He said:

"The press of this country is to be commended for the voluntary censorship which it exercised over its own news columns during the war, and I have sought the advice and cooperation of its members in dealing with the present security-of-information problem. They have advised me, and I agree, that in peacetime no type of censorship is workable or desirable."

Promotion Policy Hit

The Reserve Officers Association yesterday accused the Army of discriminating against the promotion of some 40,000 reserve officers on extended active duty.

The charge was made by Col. Clarence E. Barnes, association president, in a letter to Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall.

He said a recent Army directive on promotion was "discriminatory in the extreme" against reserve officers and is undermining their morale more than "almost any other single act which has been committed by the Department of the Army."

Barnes said that under the new directive a captain in the Regular Army may be promoted to major if he has served nine years in any lower rank, but a reserve officer must have served on active duty as captain for six years before becoming a major.

For a reserve officer to be considered for captain, he must have served about 4½ years as first lieutenant, but a Regular Army officer must merely have served four years, Barnes said.

He told Royall he had received long-distance telephone calls as well as personal protests from members of the association.

"The promulgation of such a policy has caused an adverse effect on the morale of the reserve officers who, at the invitation of the Regular Army, have remained on extended active duty for a long period of years," he wrote.

Truman Approves Air Guard Transfer

Defense Secretary James Forrestal disclosed yesterday that President Truman has approved in "oral discussions" a controversial proposal to transfer the Air National Guard from State to Federal control.

The defense chief announced earlier this month that he was asking that the Air Guard and Air Reserve be merged into a single unit under the Air Force.

Yesterday he made public the text of his recommendation to the President as an appendix to his annual report to Mr. Truman. In it he stated:

"Since I understand from our oral discussions of this subject that you are fully in accord with this view, I have directed the preparation of legislation which would permit the consolidation, under Federal direction, of these reserve components of the Air Force."

National Guard leaders have promised a "fight to the finish" against any plan to federalize the guard.

Forrestal said he considered the recommendation to transfer all the National Guard to Federal control "militarily" sound, but was making no proposal respecting the ground forces at this time.

A board, headed by Assistant Army Secretary Gordon Gray urged Federalization of the entire Guard last summer.

The defense chief said that as to the ground elements of the Guard "other considerations" must be weighed. He mentioned the morale and attitude of guardsmen who oppose the idea the "ancient traditional ties" to the States, and the role the ground Guard plays in peacetime within the States.

"Serious schisms" which might develop from a legislative battle might harm the whole defense effort, he added.

"At the same time," Forrestal added, "I must state my firm conviction that the National Guard cannot be welded into an effective M-Day (Mobilization Day) force unless there is, insofar as Federal missions are concerned, a greater, or at least more effective, degree of Federal control over personnel, equipment and facilities leased or constructed with Federal funds, and over allocation of funds and of the type and assignment of units in accordance with strategic requirements.

"If experience demonstrates that adequate Federal control over these factors which affect the M-Day readiness of the Guard cannot be provided, or effectively exercised under the present dual arrangement, I would then unquestionably be forced to advocate the incorporation of the Guard into a wholly Federal reserve force."

The reasons for deferring action on the ground guard do not apply to the Air Forces, Forrestal declared. Effective Air Forces cannot be organized, trained and manned in an emergency when they are under control of "48 different commanders in chief," he maintained.

"The role of the Air National Guard is almost exclusively confined to national preparedness," said Forrestal. "The Air National Guard as now constituted is unsuitable for the normal peacetime State mission of the National Guard to protect life and property point above the earth and then be directed down toward its target.

U. S. Considers Use Of Space Satellites

Such a satellite would have other uses, scientists said. It could relay television beams, send back weather reports and provide a "fix" for navigators in planes and ships. Television waves, like radar, will not follow the curvature of the earth, but shoot off into space.

The feasibility of reaching objects so far away as this was demonstrated more than a year ago, when Air Force scientists "bounced" signals off the moon.

Qualified scientists believe we now have the basic knowledge to create such an artificial satellite and guidance system. They consider it possible of accomplishment within a reasonable time—perhaps 10 to 20 years. Many problems, however, such as launching a rocket to such heights, development of new metal alloys and fuels, etc., must be overcome first.

They do not laugh off suggestions that much larger space ships may be built eventually, to carry men and even rocket launchers, to such fantastic distances. But any such program would be many, many years in the future, it is emphasized.

The brief reference to the project in the research board's report was contained in a general discussion of the guided missiles program.

"The Earth Satellite Vehicle Program, which is being carried out independently by each military service, was assigned to the committee on guided missiles for coordination," it was stated. "To provide an integrated program with resultant elimination of duplication, the committee recommended that current efforts in this field be limited to studies and component designs; well-defined areas of such research have been allocated to each of the three military departments."

Biggest Fog Bank of Universe Found 1000 Light Years Deep

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 29.—Discovery of the greatest dust cloud in the universe was reported to the American Astronomical Society today.

The cloud is a celestial fog bank so vast that a sunbeam would take 1000 years to pass one side. This cloud is known to astronomers as "the fish on the platter."

Anyone can see the fish with naked eyes in midsummer by looking almost straight overhead, around midnight, at the constellation Northern Cross, also called Cygnus.

In this contellation, and right in the glow of the Milky Way, the cloud is a dark, fish-shaped patch. The fish is surrounded by a platter-shaped rim of light, coming from stars too distant to be seen.

There are many fog banks in the universe, but this is the first to have its depth measured. The depth is the enormous distance that light can travel in a thousand years.

The discovery was reported by J. J. Nassau and D. MacRae of the Warner and Swasey Observatory, Cleveland.

Alongside the fish is a hole in the Milky Way. Telescopes looking into this hole see 1250 stars strung out along its depths to immense distances from the earth.

U. N. Orders Jews to Quit Negev Desert

Aviv today admitted that Israeli planes were attacking Egyptian positions outside Israel, but denied there has been any invasion of Egyptian territory. He promised newsmen front-line inspections within 24 or 48 hours.

It seemed likely the cease-fire order at least would be accorded the Dutch treatment. The spokesman in Tel Aviv said today the Christmas offensive in the Negev is about over, with mopping up under way.

In Cairo, an Egyptian communique said the Egyptian planes were "inflicting heavy losses" upon Israeli tanks and armored cars, and that three Israeli planes had been shot down.

Tel Aviv, Dec. 29 (NYHT.).—The Israeli army reported today the seizure of several Egyptian positions and the capture of a sizable number of prisoners, including a high-ranking commander and his staff of about 10 officers.

There were strong hints that the battle was no longer confined to Israeli territory in this seventh day of renewed Negev desert fighting. An official army representative denied reports that Israeli troops had driven 10 miles across the Egyptian border and were nearing the main Egyptian air base of El Arish

Bunche Urges Unceasing Fight To End Racial Segregation

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, director of the United Nations' division of trusteeship, last night told approximately 800 delegates to the twenty-eighth annual convention here of Alpha Kappa Alpha, oldest national Negro sorority: "There is no room for compromise on the human rights issue."

"There is no better place to hold a discussion on human rights than in the Nation's Capital," he said. "Many practices here makes a mockery of democracy. I know many foreign representatives who are shocked at our status here—in the hospitals, schools, theaters, residential ghettoes and even in the churches."

Since the death of Count Folke Bernadotte, Dr. Bunche has served as mediator for the U. N. Palestine Commission.

Urging his race to fight for complete elimination of racial segregation, he said "the struggle must go on unceasingly." Upon insisting on our rights we are being good Americans . . . and in so doing we are in good company with the United States Constitution and the U. N. Charter."

He warned that the Negro must be prepared to compete in a highly competitive society, once he has obtained full rights. "A cruel by-product is that we can get so immersed in grievance that we don't hear opportunity when it knocks," he explained. "Some of us become so obscessed with and by the uphill struggle that we've become sort of 'punch drunk'—that is keep punching without looking at the target. Some Negroes would be unhappy if they suddenly gained all they asked

"On the other hand, some have become so well adjusted that they have become complaisant."

Dr. Bunche said "a second-class citizenship is unacceptable. If we are Americans we must be first-class Americans."

Asserting that the protection of human rights is the greatest challenge facing the postwar world, Dr. Bunche emphasized, "No secure and firm foundation for world peace can exist as long as the rights of large segments of people are denied. Denial of rights warps the mind."

Atomic Production Threatened in 1946

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The production of atomic weapons was virtually halted two years ago when the Hanford, Wash., plant was faced with a breakdown, Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission revealed yesterday.

Lilienthal

Lilienthal's startling revelation came during a discussion with newsmen of a report of the AEC Industrial Advisory Group. That body of eight prominent industrialists called on AEC to expand the role of industry in development and production of products of atomic energy.

Lilienthal's remarks, apparently inadvertent, came as he was remarking on the many problems his commission has faced since taking over from the Army's Manhattan District.

The Hanford plant, which develops plutonium, is being replaced by two new plants. Their cost, Lilienthal said, is half a billion dollars, and constitutes "the largest peacetime construction job in the history of the country."

Lilienthal indicated that the threatened shutdown at Hanford was discovered shortly after the commission took over December 27, 1946—two years ago last Monday. He wouldn't term it a shutdown. He instead said the situation "threatened the continuity of the development of fissionable military material."

His group had to concentrate on preventing a total break, he said. It succeeded, although operations were seriously curtailed. The production of plutonium, he said, is "now rolling."

The breakdown came because "nobody could anticipate what happens in a reactor"—that the lack of knowledge of how the materials of which a reactor is constructed would withstand the job they had to do. He explained that the materials that go into an internal combustion engine are chosen from experience, and their life can be determined.

"For technical and other reasons the atomic energy plants were built straight from the laboratory. There were no pilot plants, and no time for tests. That they developed difficulties and deterioration was not surprising."

Lilienthal emphasized that his comments did not mean criticism of E. I. duPont de Nemours and Co., which operates the plant, nor the personnel of the Manhattan District.

The Industrial Advisory Group, with which Lilienthal and newsmen were meeting, delivered a 23-page report on the "unmistakable need" for greatly expanded participation by industry in industrial development of atomic energy. Before the conference, Lilienthal made public a reply by the commission to the advisory group's criticisms and recommendations.

Among the group's conclusions were:

1. The contract system, which AEC is continually seeking to strengthen, has given industry an important part in the atomic program.

However, the only field now open to industry generally is that associated with radioisotopes. Atomic energy undoubtedly holds many other opportunities for technological development.

2. "Some of the most important branches of industry are likely to have a direct potential concern with atomic energy. Among these are the chemical, petroleum, power, heat transfer equipment, metallurgical and instrument industries."

3. If industry once becomes engaged in atomic energy development or research it may "discover for itself many lines of economically rewarding activities in this new field."

The group said the number of industries now engaged in contracts with AEC is very limited. "This condition," it said, "is unfortunate not only because it runs counter to the conviction widely held in America that opportunities for the exercise of enterprise, initiative and ingenuity on a broad scale are essential to national well-being. The commission is faced with a multitude of new technical problems which need to be solved promptly and in the interest of national security. These are the very kinds of problems which our industrial system in the past has shown itself preeminently qualified to solve."

It added that "industrial opportunities in atomic energy are potentially unlimited."

"But they are at present so shadowy that businessmen neither know where to look or what to look for.

4. That the commission put the scattered information it has already made public of interest to industry, into a form that is useful to industry. The group urged that it publish a vast amount of non-secret information and that it remove secrecy wraps from other information that industry can use.

5. That the commission develop a "broad program for clearance" of engineers, technologists and executives in interested industries

6. That the commission set up a permanent general industrial advisory committee, with as many as 20 members.

Hiss Given Delay In Chambers Suit

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—Trial of the $75,000 libel suit of Alger Hiss against Whittaker Chambers, central figures in a Communist spy probe, was postponed indefinitely today.

Attorneys for Hiss, under indictment in New York on two charges of perjury growing out of the Communist investigation, obtained the postponement from Federal Judges William C. Coleman and W. Calvin Chesnut. Attorneys for Chambers assented to the motion for delaying trial "indefinitely."

Hiss based his suit on a claim that Chambers' statements about him being a Communist were untrue. Chambers said Hiss was a Communist at hearings before the House Un-American Activities Committee and on a radio broadcast.

Elizabeth Bentley Served in Libel Suit

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Richard G. Green, attorney for William W. Remington in his $100,000 libel suit against Elizabeth T. Bentley, self-styled former Communist spy, said he personally served a summons on her today.

Green said the serving ended a 12-week hunt for Miss Bentley. She was located in The Bronx, he said, but refused to give her address.

Remington, suspended Commerce Department employe, charges Miss Bentley said he was a member of the Communist Party on a television program.

Green said he got a court order permitting him personally to serve a summons on Miss Bentley after United States marshals in Brooklyn and Manhattan said they were unable to find her. He said he would ask a prompt trial of the case.

Holds 'Steady'

Condition Of Welles Satisfactory

Former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was in "steady and satisfactory" condition at Casualty Hospital last night, his physician reported.

It was still not determined apparently whether any of his frost-bitten fingers or toes would have to undergo surgery.

No operation had been scheduled yesterday, and under the hospital's procedure operations are usually scheduled 24 hours in advance.

The former Undersecretary is under care of private nurses 24 hours a day.

Welles was hospitalized Sunday morning after he was found unconscious in a field more than a mile from his home at Oxon Hill, Md. He apparently had suffered a heart attack or fallen while on a midnight stroll.

Quake Rocks Reno; Shocks Hit California

Reno, Nev., Dec. 29 (AP).—A rumbling earthquake jarred Reno severely today and set off "trigger action" shocks felt throughout north central California.

No one was injured, but widely scattered minor damage was reported. Telephone lines were down.

Most roughly shaken was Verdi, a small mountain community 10 miles west of here. Windows were shattered, chimneys knocked over and plaster shaken loose.

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. in San Francisco said substations at Fresno, Stockton, Sacramento, Marysville and Auburn reported a severe jolt. Service was not interrupted.

San Diego, about 510 miles south of Reno, also reported a minor quake at 5:57.10 a. m.

Mundt Urges U. S. Information Support at $50 Million a Year

A 50-million-dollar annual appropriation for the Voice of America and allied foreign information activities of the State Department was recommended yesterday by Senator-elect Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.).

The sum, about four times the present appropriation, should be granted "as a minimum" for the next six years, Mundt said, advocating that it be divided equally between the Voice of America broadcast to foreign countries and the complementary long-range information program.

Mundt, who introduced enabling legislation for the shortwave broadcasts in 1947, said that the programs were performing an "indispensable function that may avert war, or worse, the loss of freedom without war."

Speaking to a convention session of the Speech Association of America, meeting in the Statler Hotel, the Congressman said the Voice was doing its job of influencing human opinion abroad "tremendously inadequately" because of insufficient funds.

He also declared that we must have a "definable" foreign policy before the Voice can make itself understood. He criticized what he termed departure from a policy of "resisting further aggression of communism any place in the world."

"Our bipartisan foreign policy is becoming a bifocal foreign policy," he said. "I think we have to have an American foreign policy which means in Asia what it means in Greece."

Dr. Victor M. Hunt, acting associate chief of the State Department's International Radio Division, said 13,000 letters were written to the Voice of America in November alone, which, he said is proof of the programs' effectiveness.

About 1300 experts on the spoken word, mostly teachers, are attending the joint three-day convention here of the Speech Association of America, the American Speech and Hearing Association, and the American Educational Theater Association.

Dr. Philip J. Glasner, chief of the speech clinic in the Children's Psychiatric Service at Johns Hopkins Hospital, told the morning ASHA section meeting that the "disruptive influence" of grandparents, aunts and relatives is a prime factor in 33 per cent of the child stuttering cases treated at Johns Hopkins clinic.

"A calm and consistent household, even though unduly strict," he said, "is far less likely to produce child stutterers than an indecisive one."

Melba Hurd Duncan of Brooklyn College told the group "a significant number of adult stutterers said they felt a lack of love and understanding in the home."

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, before a joint luncheon, warned that colleges cannot ignore "the question of survival," and last night Catholic University put on a special production of Aristophanes' "The Birds."

A discussion on "Speech and the Process of Conciliation" at 9 a. m. today will highlight the final day's program.

Veteran Enters 'Risky' Business

The Washington Post

ARTHUR J. McDONALD, Jr., of 3982 Blaine st. ne., a 21-year-old veteran of the Frst Armored Division and a GI student at the University of Maryland, is the person who put that strange "ad" in The Washington Post's classified column: "Too risky for you to do? Call me after 12 p. m. VI 0226," said McDonald. It's his idea of a way to build up his bank roll and said he is willing to do anything within the law, "so long as I'm still alive after doing it"

Enjoy Bill Gold's column in The Post. You'll like "This Is Washington" on WTOP, 10 A.M. Monday through Friday.

New Spy Data Given Probers, Says Mundt

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Baltimore Sun quoted Representative Mundt (R., S. Dak.) tonight that the House Un-American Activities Committee had obtained enough new information from Whittaker Chambers to keep the group and its staff "constantly at work for six months or a year.

In a dispatch from William Knighton, jr., of its Washington bureau, the newspaper said the Congressman had disclosed:

Representatives Mundt, acting chairman of the House committee, and Nixon (R., Calif.), along with Robert P. Stripling, chief investigator for the committee, a stenographer and other committee aides met with the confessed former Communist agent at Chambers' farm near Westminster, Md.

Chambers talked for five hours, almost without interruption, while under oath, and gave the committeemen "a new sense of the comprehensive size of the (Communist espionage) operation."

The Sun story said:

"The acting chairman said Chambers revealed new names connected with the spy ring, but he declined to make them public.

"The figures named by Chambers, Mr. Mundt said, did not include any new suppliers of information to the 'apparatus.'

"They included," he added, "some persons who are dead and some who now are operating in other countries."

Knighton reported he was told:

"By getting Chambers to give for the first time a complete chronology of his activities, in connection with the espionage group that worked for the Soviet government, the committee was able to get a clearer picture of its extent, how it operated, its geographical significance and a good idea of the number of persons involved."

12 Airmen Owe Icecap Rescue To Gamble Against Time, Cold

By The Associated Press

A precision-timed gamble against bitter Arctic cold lay behind the aerial rescue of 12 United States fliers marooned on an icecap in Greenland, it was disclosed last night.

Success of the daring operation, as described by Air Force officers, depended upon the swiftness of its execution. It was carried out in exactly 38 minutes. If it had taken longer, the jet equipment on the rescue plane might have frozen.

The 12 rescued castaways were still in Greenland, but tentative plans were in the making to bring at least some of them home for a hero's welcome.

Lieut. Jack McCauley, Air Force headquarters representative from Washington, expressed the hope the men and their two rescuers could be brought to New York for the "biggest possible reception."

However, Mayor O'Dwyer's office in New York said it had no information about a reception for the castaways and their two rescuers.

In Washington, Lieut. Col. F. Clark Newlon, chief of Air Force headquarters press branch, said the men have "certainly earned a little leave," and "they can come down if they want to."

But he said the Air Force has no plans for a big ticker-tape welcome in New York.

"They will be flown to New York for interviews and pictures—nothing more as far as we are concerned," Newlon said.

A different version came from Lieut. Col. Charles Short, public relations officer at Westover (Mass.) air base. Short told newsmen that 12 of the men will be flown to LaGuardia Airport, New York, today.

Witnesses Scored At Grill Hearing

By Sam Zagoria and Al Lewis
Post Reporters

The decision to dismiss 41 charges against Mitchell's Grill was taken by the District Commissioners Tuesday after hearing evidence reflecting on the veracity of both principal witnesses, it was learned last night.

The city heads held two closed hearings to determine what action to take on an appeal by Henry G. David, owner of the grill at 235 G st. nw., from the 53-day suspension by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

At the second one, held Tuesday morning, Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace, major prosecution witness, was scored by defense spokesman as unreliable. Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, chief defense witness who accused Wallace of engineering a "frame-up" of the grill, was also under fire.

What Happened at Hearing

This is what happened at the session behind closed doors, The Washington Post learned:

F. Joseph Donohue, counsel for the grill, told the Commissioners they could check the veracity of the witnesses by calling on a third person who could confirm a statement made by Manthes and denied by Wallace.

The statement was that Manthos and Wallace met at Precinct No. 1 in the presence of a third person after Wallace's first check on the cafe and discussed the matter. Wallace said this meeting did not take place at No. 1 and did not include anyone beside Manthos and himself. The third person named by Manthos was Precinct Detective Charles K. Daub.

After the closing hearing, Charles Stofberg, special assistant to John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, was directed to communicate with Daub and ask him if he saw such a meeting at No. 1. Daub confirmed this, Stofberg said. Daub could not be reached.

Manthos was roundly attacked by Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise as being untruthful in stating he had visited the cafe from midnight September 17 to 1:45 a. m. September 18, one of the evenings on which Wallace charged violations took place there.

Arrest Recorded

Wise declared the "arrest book" at Precinct No. 1 showed Manthos made an arrest at 12:10 a. m. at Franklin Park. The prosecution counsel argued therefore that Manthos could not have been in the grill at that time.

Manthos, according to three persons present at the closed session, admitted he was in error on the statement, but that he could not fix times exactly and had given the hours according to his best recollection.

The upsetting of the ABC verdict of guilty on 41 counts by the Commissioners was taken philosophically by Assistant Corporation Counsel Wise. He declared, "If the Commissioners, as indicated, found that the evidence in this case was conflicting and if the entire evidence created a reasonable doubt in their minds, then it was the Commissioners' duty under the law to resolve that doubt in favor of the defendants and acquit them."

A further development in the controversial case is expected when Inspector George E. Wallrodt completes an investigation of the conflicting testimony and reports to Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, who may recommend trial board action against either patrolman.

Wallrodt, according to Wise, was seated outside the closed meeting Tuesday, ready to show a copy of the Precinct No. 1 "arrest book" to the commissioners covering the arrest made on a night that he earlier had said he visited the grill. He was not called, however, because of Manthos' admission, Wise said.

C. K. DAUB,

Higher Ceiling on Election Spending Asked

Congress was asked yesterday to raise the ceiling on campaign spending by political candidates because it costs more to get elected these days.

The recommendation was made by a five-man House Campaign Expenditures Committee which investigated the 1948 congressional elections.

The committee proposed that the legal limits be raised "substantially." It didn't specify how much. The Corrupt Practices Act, as amended in 1911, sets a $5000 limit on candidates for the House and $10,000 on the Senate.

The committee said:

"The exchange value of a dollar in terms of goods and services has declined considerably in the quarter century that has passed since those limitations were established."

On the same basis, the committee called for an increase in the Hatch Act limitations, which set $5000 as the maximum contribution by any individual and three million dollars on spending by any political committee.

The committee reasoned that in addition to higher costs of goods and services, such as printing, etc., there has been a big population increase and therefore more voters to be contacted.

As an alternative, it proposed that Congress fix a definite limit on the amount that can be spent on behalf of any candidate for Federal office — by himself or through political committees.

"The Corrupt Practices Act has established a maximum of expenditures beyond which a candidate may not go," the committee observed. "But there is no limit to the amount a political committee or organization may expend to further his campaign, whether he knows about it or not."

The only limit on political committees is the total amount they may spend. There is nothing to prevent putting it all behind a single man.

The committee also said that candidates for the House should be relieved of the Corrupt Practices Act requirement that they file with the clerk of the House a complete statement of receipts and expenditures 10 to 15 days before the election.

The committee called it an "undue hardship at a time when his campaign is coming to a climax." It suggested filing such statements within 30 days after the election.

Falls Church Awards Water Tank Contract

Falls Church City Council last night voted to award to Chicago Bridge & Iron Co. a contract for construction of a one million gallon water storage tank on a bid of $33,300.

The Council, meeting in City Hall, rejected as too high bids of $15,000 from Nance & Vivadelli and $16,610 from Bowerman Bros. for construction of the tank's foundation. Requests for bids will be readvertised.

Plan Forcing Rules Committee To Free Bills Afoot in House

Holifield (D., Calif.) has announced a separate opening day move to reform procedures of the committee if it is continued.

Two Possible Moves

Recognizing that the committee probably can muster the votes it needs to survive, some critics of the committee were weighing two other possible moves in Saturday's Democratic caucus.

One would authorize the Speaker-to-be to appoint a bipartisan select committee of six House members to recommend a formal code of fair procedure not only for the Un-American Activities group but for all congressional investigating committees.

Another proposed move would change the House rules to make any chairman of a House committee ineligible for service on another committee. This is apparently aimed at an individual member of theiHouse Un-Amercan Activities Committee—Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.). Rankin is slated to be chairman of the House Veterans Committee while retaining his membership on the Red-hunting body.

Coincident with the weekend round of party organization huddles, the expiring Eightieth Republican Congress will return tomorrow for a one-day stand before passing over control to the Democrats Monday. No business will be transacted in Friday's dying session and if leaders have their way, customary session-end oratory will be brief.

GOP Caucus Also Set

Democratic Senators will caucus Friday morning and House Republicans Friday afternoon. The Senate GOP Policy Committee will meet at 2 p. m. today to discuss the Friday Senate session, but Senate Republicans won't organize as a body until Monday morning, just before the Eighty-first Congress meets.

More doubt was thrown on Senate Republican leadership plans when Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.), announced that he is not and will not be a candidate for Republican floor leader. Millikin had prominently figured for leader on one slate, topped by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), for chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee. Taft was still actively seeking the policy chairmanship, and is believed to hold the votes, but Millikin's announcement left the two other top GOP Senate leadership spots open to speculation.

Millikin is now chairman of the Senate Republican conference and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), had been mentioned as his possible successor in that role. Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.), is still actively seeking the Senate floor leadership role.

Democrats Report Surplus

by Louis Johnson, chairman of the party's financial committee, and Joe L. Blythe, treasurer of the national committee, wiped out the deficit that existed at the end of the campaign and left the committee with a $100,000 surplus for the year.

$100 Dinner to Help

The financial picture now looks bright for the Democrats. Their annual money-raising venture, the $100-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, will be held here on February 24. Similar dinners will be held throughout the country on that or other dates.

Normally, these dinners bring in between $600,000 and $750,000. The last time the amount was considerably below this, partly because of the gloomy prospects for the Democrats and partly because of the Dixiecrat revolt in the South. In view of what happened on November 2, a record-breaking "take" is expected this time.

Hears 2 Tales Of Halloween

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday listened to conflicting reports about a Halloween breakfast at Bob White's Seafood Restaurant, 319 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Police Sergt. Wayland W. Whittemore testified he found a half-filled bottle of liquor and glasses smelling of alcohol on checking the establishment in the wee hours of Halloween.

charges of permitting patrons to drink liquor during prohibited hours, and allowing his waitresses to serve ice, soda and ginger ale "setups." He described the affair as a gay meal topping off an evening of revelry, but contended servings were limited to coffee, eggs and soft drinks.

Layoffs Announced By Two Railroads

Cleveland, Dec. 29 (AP).—One major coal-carrying railroad announced layoffs for 3000 employes today and one eastern carrier reported "extensive" cuts in personnel for economy reasons.

Chesapeake & Ohio, which employed about 43,000 workers several months ago, made public the cut of 3000. A senior vice president of the road predicted reductions in personnel for the entire industry in the coming year.

At New Haven, Conn., the president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, Laurence F. Whittemore, reported that for reasons of economy an "extensive" reduction in the road's personnel would be made. There are 23,000 workers on the road's payrolls, but he did not indicate what proportion might be affected.

An indication that midwestern freight shipments would be down slightly during the first quarter of 1949 came today from Chicago, where the Midwest Shippers Advisory Board issued its forecasts for the next three months.

Compared with the first quarter of 1948, railroad carloadings in the Midwest are expected to drop 2.4 per cent to 864,277 cars, said Clayton F. Devine, general chairman of the board.

Among the decreases, the heaviest was forecast as 39.8 per cent for automobiles and trucks. The heaviest increase was expected to be 33 per cent, for grain.

The Chesapeake & Ohio official emphasized that coal shipments were a major factor for his railroad.

"The main cause is a decline in business volume which began in November," said Ross Marshall. "Yesterday, we loaded 3550 cars with coal. This compares with 5000 to 5500 daily before the slowdown. We are a coal-carrying railroad," he said.

Marshall said the production of coal is satisfying all present requirements.

"Also, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Poland are mining more coal. They aren't going to buy it here if they can satisfy their own needs. I don't think we'll export any coal to Europe in three years."

Marshall said that passenger service also would suffer next year.

"We've already decided to consolidate two of our George Washington trains in the Chesapeake district. Next summer, resort trains from Chicago and Detroit will be cut from six to three weekly."

Marshall said the consolidation of through trains would mean a reduction in the number of hostesses "by about 20."

The resort trains are in the Pere Marquette district of the C. & O. system, he said. The Chesapeake district, C. & O.'s other division, has felt most of the labor cutback thus far.

The railroad employed about 43,000 persons before the layoffs began several months ago, Marshall said. About 35,000 of the total are employed in the Chesapeake district. The entire system embraces 5000 miles of track in nine States, the District of Columbia, and Canada.

"We've had an outstandingly high personnel rate," Marshall said. "We've had to lay off in the maintenance and way limb of the business because most of our track improvement work is finished."

The railroad will have laid off about 5500 persons in all departments by January 1, including the 3000 announced today a company spokesman said. No prediction was made as to the duration of the layoffs, which included 92 men in the Richmond, Va., repair shops.

At Washington, a Southern Railway official said his line had returned to a prewar practice of a reduction in forces during the holidays, but he doesn't know the total number of employes affected.

For Paying Basis

French Told Industrial Reform Plan

Paris, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Premier Henri Queuille's reform program for French nationalized industries was made public today. Its broad aims would remove management from politicians' hands, put the enterprises on a paying basis, and, in so doing, imitate the methods of private business.

The Queuille cabinet measure, as submitted to the National Assembly for debate and approval, was definitely a refinement of, if not a retreat from, the popular postwar conviction that socialized management of public services was best for the people.

In other words, the coalition administration had come to the conclusion that purely political control of state-owned industries was impractical under the multi-party system of government existing in France.

By Vienna Blonde

D. C. Man Is Sued for $325,000

F. T. NORCROSS

A Viennese blonde yesterday in District Court sued for $325,000 from Fernando T. Norcross, 4420 Hawthorne rd. nw., claiming the wartime Army colonel is the father of her 2-year-old daughter, Elizabeth.

The suit against the 57-year-old, married president of Associated Engineers, Inc., was filed by Elfriede Halmschlager, 33, who is a former Austrian government worker, now residing in Washington, according to her attorney.

While a colonel, Norcross was chief of the Internal Affairs Division, United States Forces in Austria, at about the time of the alleged tryst, records revealed. He is married and has a married son.

The Austrian woman is described by her attorney, Lewis Jacobs, as an "attractive blonde." She alleges in her suit that Norcoross "unjustly seduced," her in his Vienna apartment, January 16, 1946.

She claimed she gave birth to the child in Paris October 17, 1946, as a result of the seduction.

Miss Halmschlager asserted she lived with Norcross in Austria and France from December 31, 1945, to December, 1946, after he allegedly promised to marry her. She asked in the suit for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise; $100,000 for alleged breach of contract, maintaining Norcross broke an agreement to support the child, and $75,000 for compensation for alleged seduction, as well as $100,000 punitive damages.

Miss Halmschlager said she had been subjected to "scorn and ridicule," "pain and suffering," and loss of marriage prospects. She maintained that Norcross did not tell her he was married to some one else, at the time of their alleged rendezvous.

Miss Halmschlager stated in her suit that the child is living with her and being cared for by her.

Miss Halmschlager and her child were admitted to this country as a visitor on business, immigration authorities said. The business was said to relate to commercial photography. She is under investigation for having possibly overstayed her time limit, authorities confirmed.

Norcross refused to comment on the court action beyond saying: "I'm not ready to talk now. This thing may ruin my reputation. Give me a chance to get my breath!"

He added that he planned to see his attorney today.

Norcross received the Royal Order of the British Empire for meritorious service in the Italian campaign.

Wider Security Plan Proposed By Republican

By The Associated Press

An influential Republican agreed with President Truman yesterday that present old-age insurance is "inadequate," and announced he will offer a bill to double the minimum benefits, and take 20 million more persons into the program.

This expansion was proposed by Representative Robert W. Kean (R., N. J.), member of the House Ways and Means Committee that originates Social Security legislation.

The Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress brushed aside Mr. Truman's proposal for a 50 per cent increase in old-age insurance benefits and broadening of the program to increase the coverage from some 30 million employed persons to 50 million.

Kean's Proposals

Kean said his bill, which conforms closely to the President's suggestions, would extend old-age protection to the self-employed, farm workers, servants and all other workers except those covered by special programs, such as Federal and railroad employes, and some workers for State and local governments.

It would permit employes of church groups to join if they desired.

Kean's proposed bill would provide:

1. A minimum benefit to elderly persons of $20 a month and a maximum of $120. This compares with a present minimum monthly payment of $10 and a maximum of $85. The size of the benefit is determined by a person's earnings during his working years.

Other Provisions

2. A reduction from 10 to 5 in the number of years a person must participate in the program with Social Security deductions from his pay before he is eligible to old age benefits.

3. Individuals would be given the choice of having their average earnings computed beginning in 1937 or 1950, whichever gives them the larger benefits in old age. This would raise the level of benefits to many early participants in the program, since general earnings are much higher than 12 years ago.

4. The retirement age for women would be reduced to 62. Benefit eligibility for men still would begin at 65. The program is available only to employed persons.

Beneficiary Earnings

5. A retired worker could draw these old age benefits so long as he earned no more than $40 a month. The present law limits these earnings to $15.

Kean said there would be little, if any, additional cost to the Government in such an expansion, because the increased number of participants in the program would mean more revenue for the social security fund.

The program is supported by a one per cent tax each on employes pay and employers' payrolls. This will jump to ½ per cent on each in 1950, unless congress decides to step up the tax earlier.

Democrats are expected to present a bill of their own.

Spouse Under Peace Bond

William E. Smith, 27, of 3748 Foote st. ne., was placed under $500 peace bond yesterday on a charge of threatening to kill his wife. The incident allegedly occurred in the Child Welfare Division, 470 Indiana ave. nw.

He was arrested by two detectives who said they saw Smith choking his wife, Mrs. Doris Smith, 25, after dragging her down the steps.

In Municipal Court, Smith said he threatened the woman only because she refused to tell him in what foster home she had placed their 9-month-old daughter.

Oak Ridge Need of Pipeline For Gas Supply Challenged

The need of an immediate gas pipeline to the Oak Ridge atomic energy plant—advocated as necessary for defense—was challenged yesterday at a Federal hearing.

Sumner Pike, member of the Atomic Energy Commission, said an alternate fuel supply is vital at the plant which now depends on coal.

Oak Ridge, Tenn., he said, has the only facility in this country for production of Uranium-235. And, he continued, this plant must run continuously under any emergency.

Opposed in Several Quarters

Opposition came from several quarters.

H. K. Thatcher of the Arkansas Development Commission questioned in a statement whether Oak Ridge needs the gas any more than the country needs aluminum.

Fletcher Plumley of the Reynolds Metal Co. read Thatcher's statement.

If the scarce steel pipe is given first to the Oak Ridge project, Thatcher said, there likely will be a delay in getting steel for a pipeline project needed to expand aluminum production at the Reynolds plant at Jones Mill, Ark.

And aluminum, he said, is greatly needed now for rural electrification projects.

Coal Held Ample

James W. Haley, general counsel for the National Coal Association, contended there is no question as to the coal industry's ability to supply coal needs of the Oak Ridge plant for centuries. He questioned Pike's comment that the commission had been unable to stockpile coal satisfactorily.

W. H. Hopkins, general counsel for the United Mine Workers, said in a telegram that the plan threatens unemployment for miners.

The hearing was on a proposed voluntary plan worked out by the Office of Industrial Cooperation and the Steel Advisory Committee.

The plan involves early shipment of 25,000 tons of 22-inch steel pipe to the East Tennessee Natural Gas Co. for construction of a 164-mile line from Mitchellville, Tenn., to Oak Ridge.

Details of the plan, together with a transcript of today's hearing, will be submitted to Secretary of Commerce Sawyer for his approval. If he approves, it then will be submitted to the Attorney General for consideration.

CIO Leaders See President On Legislation

By the United Press

President Truman returned from his Christmas vacation yesterday to plunge into a series of conferences on his program for the Eighty-first Congress, which meets Monday.

His first talk was with a group of CIO leaders, who presented their ideas of what Congress should do. At the top of the list is repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

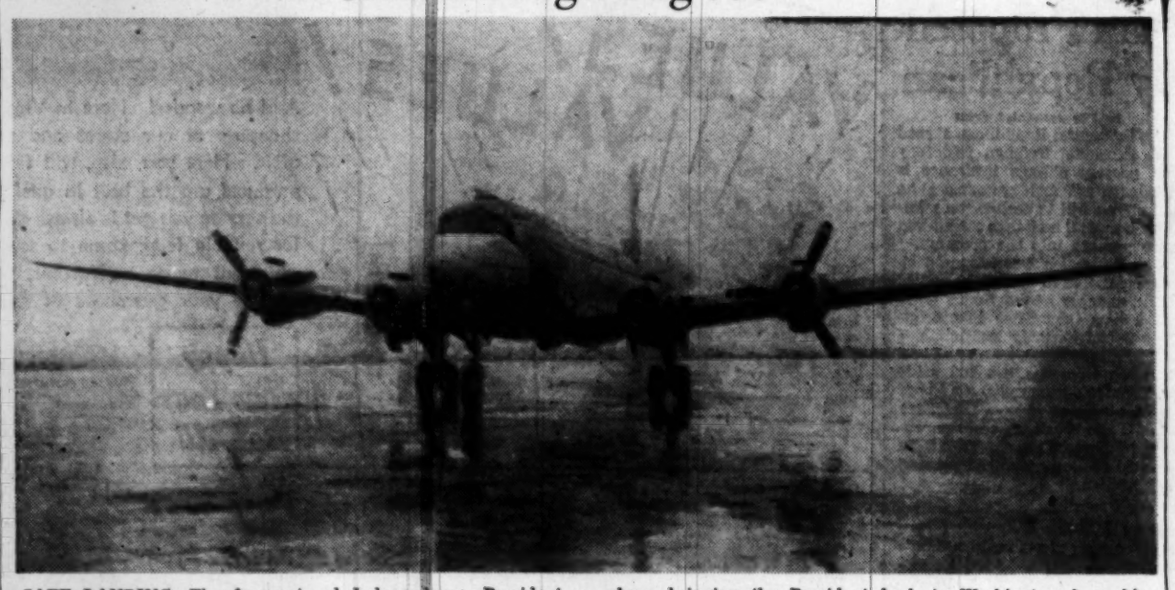
Mr. Truman postponed a conference, scheduled for today with Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), who is to be the new Speaker of the House. They probably will meet Friday.

The President will lay out his own program in a state of the Union message to a joint session scheduled for next Wednesday.

One of the most troublesome problems for Mr. Truman and his fellow Democrats is likely to be the civil rights issue, which set off the Southern revolt against the White House last summer.

The American Civil Liberties Union, over the signatures of 50 of its followers, released last night a letter to Mr. Truman urging him to "steamroller" the civil rights program through his Southern opposition. They called first for a change of Senate rules to prevent a Southern filibuster, and then passage of antipoll tax, antilynching, antisegregation and fair employment legislation.

President's Plane Cuts Through Fog . . .



SAFE LANDING—The four-motored Independence, President Truman's personal plane, comes down through the "soup" for a safe landing yesterday at fog-bound National Airport. The plane, bringing the President back to Washington from his Christmas vacation in Missouri, was "stacked" over the airport about 40 minutes before it could be guided down

Two Austrian Children Here For New Life

Christmas came a day late to Dr. and Mrs. Hans F. Smetana, but since they had been waiting 18 months for their very special gifts to each other they didn't mind another day.

Their very special gifts, two smiling, blonde tots they had adopted, arrived December 26 by air all the way from Vienna at LaGuardia Airport, N. Y.

Last night the children, curly-haired Roswitha, who is 4½, and sturdy Rainer, 3, played about the Smetana apartment at 6100 14th st. nw. as though it had always been their home.

Sister Cut Red Tape

Although the adoption process took 18 months, Dr. Smetana, Austrian born himself, said much red tape was cut through efforts of his sister, Mrs. Betty Holtzmann, in Vienna. Mrs. Holtzmann selected the two children from a displaced children's home there and carried through the adoption arrangements with Vienna authorities, the United States Consulate and the Military Government. Meanwhile, Dr. Smetana said, he and his wife were undergoing a thorough investigation here by the District Welfare Board.

Rainer, the youngest, was taken into Mrs. Holtzmann's home about 8 months ago and Roswitha visited there often, Dr. Smetana said, so that the two, who are not related, would become more closely associated. He made no effort to learn of their background, he said.

Finally, word was received that the children would be placed aboard a Pan American Airways plane in Vienna on Christmas Eve and would arrive in New York the following day. The eager parents-to-be hurried to New York to greet their unseen children, but no plane arrived on Christmas Day.

Sunday morning, they found that the plane had been grounded in Eire for 24 hours. It landed that afternoon.

Timid at First

Timid at first, the children didn't want to part from a Viennese girl engaged to an American soldier who had befriended them on the trip. Their spirits rose on the automobile trip into the city, however.

Laughing and nudging one another they babbled along about the "autobuses" they saw on the highway, and observing some buildings being razed they cried out, "kaput."

Here in Washington they seem no different from any other energetic American children. They cannot seem to get enough fruit though, Mrs. Smetana said Rainer tore the lid off a basket of oranges in his haste to eat one, she said, and on one occasion ate a tomato

Truman Lands In Fog Here

National airport, at 2.29 P. M. It was then cruising at 10,000 feet altitude.

According to officials at the airport, it takes the average plane two minutes to descend each 1000 feet during a landing.

Airport officials assured newsmen that despite a miss-twirled "broken ceiling," landing conditions were "perfectly safe." Nevertheless, the field lights were turned on in that mid-afternoon hour and their yellow flow appeared to darken as the fog closed down

Four Flights "Stacked Up"

Earlier in the day some commercial flights had been held off at a distance from the mist-shrouded airport, but by the time Mr. Truman's plane was ready to come in officials said all craft were entering Washington without interruption and were making "instrument approaches" to the airport, and radar-controlled landings.

By 2:30 p. m. four flights—including the presidential plane—were stacked up waiting the control tower signal to land. The three commercial ships in the vanguard came in first.

Pilot Williams told reporters after landing that, like Mr. Truman, he was not particularly disturbed while awaiting his turn to land.

"I wouldn't have come in if it were dangerous," he said. "It was a routine letdown procedure which commercial airlines are doing as soon as she selected it in a grocery store.

Roswitha is quite a grown-up little lady. She brushes her teeth, combs her hair and helps dry the dishes.

Affection for Each Other

The youngsters have a genuine affection for one another, too. When Roswitha bumped her head against a chair last night, Rainer dropped the photographer's flash bulb he was playing with and hurried to comfort her, kissing the bumped place.

Rainer laughs and grins all the time as he scrambles about the floor of the apartment playing with his new toys. Roswitha, more serious, smiles not so readily but infuses everyone near her when her laughter breaks through.

Happy as the children are, the Smetanas appear even happier. Mrs. Smetana's biggest regret is that, speaking no German, she must rely on her husband's translating the youngsters' remarks to her. The childless couple plans to complete formal adoption in Washington in addition to the Austrian adoption already undergone.

Dr. Smetana, chief pathologist at the Army Institute of Pathology, first came to the United States in 1923 on a visit to lecture at Johns Hopkins University, but stayed on. He taught at Columbia University for 15 years and worked in China under the Rockefeller Foundation.

Hoover Commission to Ask Two Months Longer on Report

By The Associated Press

The Hoover Commission will ask the expiring Congress for a 60-day extension of the January 13 deadline for submission of its report on Government reform, it announced yesterday.

The request is to be made on Friday, a staff member said. The Eightieth Congress holds its final session that day.

The Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch, headed by former President Herbert Hoover, was created by the present Congress with instructions to report within the first 10 days of the Eighty-first Congress, which convenes January 3.

A delay will be necessary, an official explained, because of the scope of the report. The reports of the commission's score or more of "task forces" alone amount to two million words. Some already have been made public.

Meanwhile, a Hoover Commission "task force" proposed yesterday that the Government let the Nation's 400,000 Indians have a bigger share in running their affairs.

As one step in lifting the Indian out of his status of a Government "ward," the group urged the transfer of tribal property to Indian-owned corporations. The Government now holds legal title to tribal land, buildings and other installations.

The report also scolded the Government for failure to bring about a greater improvement in Indian standards of living, education and health.

It proposed an intensified program of education and training in better farming methods, soil conservation and the management of Indian-owned grazing and timberlands.

The document is the work of the "task force" on Indian affairs headed by George Graham, professor of political science at Princeton University.

While the group did not specifically call for more Federal appropriations for the Bureau of Indian Affairs or other Federal agencies involved, heavier Government spending was implied in its proposals.

The report said the Government now spends $40,000,000 a year on Indians, or about $500 for each family. Most of the money goes, however, into the salaries of the 12,000 Federal employes concerned in Indian affairs and on the operation and upkeep of schools, hospitals, reservation projects and roads.

The Indian is a poor farmer, the report said, and his problem is greater because the Government has given him poor land to till. His income was said to be about $1000 a year for each farm family, or one-third the gross earnings of the average white farm family.

Weather Often Delays Landings at Airport

President Truman's wait in the skies yesterday was an experience undergone by many air travelers who have arrived over Washington during bad weather conditions.

Last weeeknd it was disclosed that a special committee of the Civil Aeronautics Administration is studying suitable sites for a second airport to serve Washington and relieve congestion at National Airport when the skies close in.

During bad weather only 12 to 15 planes an hour can land at National. Those additional planes which arrive during the hour must "stack up" and await their turn to land.

try which could command a landing priority over other aircraft during a "stacking" wait. But he said it might have been dangerous for a plane flying at a higher level than the other waiting planes, as the Independence was, to land first because of the possibility of colliding with the lower craft.

Returning from his Christmas holidays in Missouri, Mr. Truman took off from Fairfax Field, Kans., at 11:10 a. m.

Newsmen's Plane Lags Hours Behind Truman

Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 29 (U.P.). Newsmen and photographers assigned to the White House, who usually stay within minutes of Mr. Truman—in the air and on the ground—lagged far behind today when their plane developed mechanical trouble.

Mr. Truman and staff left at 11:10 a. m. EST. The press took off in a light snow and high, northwesterly wind at 3:45 p. m. EST.

The newsmen's plane landed in Washington at 7:18 p. m., more than four hours after the President.

Youth of Dual Sex Changing to Boy After Operations

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—A Los Angeles youth born with both male and female sex glands is "responding well" to surgical treatment to make him completely male, his doctor said today.

A third and perhaps final operation was performed today. The unidentified youth is now 19 and treatments have been in progress four years since the youngster, at 15, chose to be a boy.

Dr. Arthur B. Cecil said changes in growth trends are now bringing about marked increases in male traits, along with rapid diminution of female characteristics in the unusual case.

As a child, feminine glands developed a slight dominance over masculine ones as both functioned, but the youngster was reared as a boy and grew up with a boy's psychological outlook.

Rabies Feared in 300

Zaragoza, Spain, Dec. 29 (AP).—Having eaten meat from sheep bitten by mad dogs, 300 inhabitants of the town of Codo are undergoing anti-rabies treatment.

Drug to Open African Area to Cattle Raising

London, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—David Rees-Williams, parliamentary undersecretary for colonies, announced tonight that a new drug perfected by British scientists will open up Africa to cattle ranching on a vast scale.

The drug, antrycide, is both a cure for and protection against all forms of cattle diseases borne by the tsetse fly, Rees-Williams said.

An area of Africa twice the size of the United States has been made almost uninhabitable for men or beasts because of the tsetse.

The drug was a product of five years' research by the imperial chemical industries team in Manchester, and the first consignment is now on the way to the Sudan.

Rees-Williams said the discovery will enable Africa to carry much more cattle than Argentina, where there are now 33,000,000 head."

The drug is easily administered by hypodermic injections under the skin.

Dr. F. H. S. Curd, leader of the research, did not live to hear his discovery described today as "one of the greatest scientific achievements of our times."

He was killed in a British railway accident November 30.

Service Refused Them at Airport . . .

"SIT DOWN PROTEST"—Dr. Edgar G. Brown and his son, Frederick, who were refused service yesterday in the Airport coffee shop, conduct their "all-day sitdown" at the food bar. A showdown on the CAA's order banning segregation at the terminal is expected Monday enacted by the State in which such a place is located, even though the establishment itself is operated by a Federal agency.

"Plaintiff states to this court," said Ball's complaint, "that in its opinion it would be violating its contract with the Government if it did not segregate races . . ."

On the other hand, said Ball, Rentzel could abrogate the ATS contract if ATS fails to comply with his order.

Meanwhile, ATS yesterday maintained its "status quo" policy at the airport, as two Negro "sit-down strikers" waited in the coffee shop at the airport for service which was not forthcoming.

And CAA was gathering reports on violation of its segregation ban, to turn over to the Justice Department for action.

Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, said he arrived at the airport yesterday morning with his son Frederick, 21, to pick up plane tickets for a trip to New York. They stopped at the coffee shop to eat, and when refused service there "desite the CAA order, we decided to conduct an all-day sit-down," said Brown.

Brown said he sent a telegram to President Truman urging him "to speed the machinery of civil rights" to enforce the CAA order.

Between now and Sunday, said Brown, there will be a large group of ministers arriving by air for a national prayer service sponsored by the council, "and we don't want them to find this outrageous situation still uncorrected."

Airport Administrator Bennett H. Griffin asked Brown to draw up an affidavit stating the circumstances of his failure to obtain service at the coffee shop.

Similar reports for failure to serve six Negroes at the Terminal's Terrace Dining Room on Monday have been sent to CAA, and officials there said the reports will be submitted to the Justice Department to determine if they show a basis for action against ATS.

In addition to the terrace room and coffee shop, airport facilities operated by ATS include two cafeterias in the main building, one of them for Negroes; a snack bar at the main terminal and another at Military Transport Service terminal, and a cafeteria near the south hangars which has a separate room for Negroes.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, in her regular newspaper column, yesterday commented on the situation:

"It is indeed a relief to find the the Civil Aeronautics Administration has had the courage to ban racial segregation at the Washington National Airport. This is a substantial step forward in the fight that must be waged to bring our National Capital into line with what must be Government policy sanatoriums all over the country, Dr. Ashburn said Glenn Dale compares "very favorably with all of them." Staff doctors there, he said, "are performing hurculean tasks with the facilities and manpower at their command."

Wrong Lung Operated On

Dr. James S. Conant, resident surgeon at Glenn Dale, assumed the responsibility for the erroneously written operating instructions.

"Dr. Ashburn and I discussed the case over the X-rays a good half hour before the operation," Dr. Conant said, "and I am at a loss as to how it happened. It is just one of those unfortunate mistakes." He added that they perform "hundreds" of operations every year and "this was the first slip-up either of us have had."

Dr. Conant, according to Ruhland's report, was not present during the time when the chest surgery was performed on the patient, being occupied professionally elsewhere. Conant did not say who actually wrote the operating instructions.

Commissioner Mason later instructed Dr. Ruhland to call in for consultation "the very best chest man in the city to assist in repairing the damage."

Dr. Daniel L. Finucane, superintendent at Glenn Dale, held out considerable hope for the patient, explaining this type of operation is performed in several stages and that only the first stage was undertaken. He said only a portion of her ribs were removed and that the lung was only partly collapsed.

Dr. Ruhland's investigation said further that the operation was decided upon as a "possible means of helping this patient who has an extensive involvement of the left lung, and represented the conference judgment of the medical staff of the sanatorium."

In spite of the serious illness of the patient, plus the shock of the operation, Ruhland's report stated, "the patient is at the present time reported holding her own, though it should be understood that the involvement of the left lung is considered very serious, the therapeutic use of sreptomyecin apparently not helping the patient."

Ruhland told Mason he had instructed Dr. Finucane to secure more complete data on "this unfortunate accident."

Wife in Miscegenation Action Refuses to Comment on Case

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP). — Mrs. Clark Council Hamilton, whose husband is charged in Virginia with violating the State's miscegenation law, appeared at police headquarters here today to claim a suit of clothes from among the effects taken from her husband when he was arrested.

Hamilton was taken into custody here on a Virginia warrant which charged that on May 22 he did "feloniously intermarry with one Florence Madelon Hammond, a white female." The warrant charged that Hamilton is a "Negro male."

Virginia law provides a one to five-year penitentiary sentence for intermarriage between whites and Negroes. The Hamilton, neighbors said, had lived here about two months before his arrest.

To questions asked when she appeared at police headquarters, Mrs. Hamilton retorted: "What do you want to know for?"

Neighbors in the apartment house where the Hamiltons lived said Mrs. Hamilton is working in a Baltimore store.

Hamilton now is in the Roanoke County, Va., jail, to which he was removed last Thursday night.

In Roanoke, Commonwealth's Attorney Eugene W. Chelf said Hamilton, 22, has not requested bond and none has been set. He faces a hearing before Roanoke County Trial Justice R. T. Hubbard at 10 a. m. Friday.

The warrant against Hamilton was obtained November 6 by Mrs. Ada L. Hammond of RFD 4, the mother of Florence Madelon Hammond.

When Hamilton was placed in jail, he told the jailer he was a "white" man and was placed in the white section.

It could not be learned today whether he has retained a lawyer, though he has talked to two Roanoke attorneys.

Riverdale Heights

Seas of Mud 'Isolate' Md. Section

Residents of Riverdale Heights community in Prince Georges County would give a lot right now for plenty of freezing weather.

Rains have turned their already torn-up streets, particularly 57th and 58th aves., in the 6200 and 6300 blocks, into ankle-deep seas of mud, virtually isolating residents there.

A hard freeze, they say, at least would enable trucks and automobiles to get in and out, and their feet wouldn't get quite so muddy.

Mrs. George Loy, 6312 57th ave., said yesterday the streets are so muddy that fire trucks couldn't get down them in event of a fire. And neither can fuel trucks.

"If we had a fire, we'd have to stand around and watch our houses burn," she declared. She said she had to park her car three blocks from her home, then sludge through the mud.

Another resident complained that he had had to give up using his car along the 6200 block of 58th ave., after ruining a new set of automobile tires.

He now walks to the nearest bus line, he said, "ruining shoes, socks and trousers."

Arthur W. Tayman, Prince Georges County engineer, agreed with the residents that everything is a mess.

"Everything those people say is true," he said. "A bulldozer would get lost in that mud. But nothing can be done until warm weather returns."

The work, he said, is being done by Corson and Gruman, contractors.

The contract had been let at the insistence of Riverdale Heights residents, he said, and the work started in the fall under the county's special improvement district program.

The work, he said, calls for construction of streets, curbs, gutters and storm water drains. He had to stop, he added, when cold weather arrived.

Pay Proposal to Cost $13,100,000, B&OSays

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—A recommended seven-cent hourly pay increase, and reduction of the work week from 48 to 40 hours, will cost the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad $13,100,000 next year, the carrier estimated yesterday.

A special fact-finding board made the recommendations to President Truman in a dispute between the Nation's railroads and nonoperating employes.

Mencken Improving

Batimore, Dec 29 (AP). — H. L. Mencken, 68-year-old author who suffered a stroke November 23, has shown slight improvement, his physician said today. Mencken is in Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Two Airlines Seek Through-Plane Deal

A proposal to operate one-plane service from the Great Lakes region to Florida vacation points was argued before the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday by Capital and National airlines.

The airlines—Capital now serving the Lakes region and National the South—would effect the proposal by an interchange of equipment.

The terminal for the interchange would be Washington. Equipment and personnel of each of the lines would operate over both territories under a lease agreement.

Mathematical Society To Have Paid Director

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—The American Mathematical Society, which has flourished for 55 years with volunteer workers, today voted to hire a paid executive director.

Dr. J. L. Walsh of Harvard University was elected president and G. T. Whyburn of the University of Virginia was elected a trustee.

Quizzing of Elliott Roosevelt Ends Probe of Faye's Injury

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 29 (U.P.). District Attorney W. Vincent Grady questioned Elliott Roosevelt today and closed his investigation into why the razor wound on the wrist of Roosevelt's actress wife, Faye, had not been reported to authorities. He found there had been no violation of the law.

Roosevelt told reporters he had not quarreled with his wife and that her wound, a superficial one, had been entirely accidental. She received a "skin deep" cut, he said, from a safety razor blade when she reached into a medicine cabinet.

"I appeared here to deny that there had been any attempted suicide or that there had been any family disagreement," he said.

"I think the sheriff went a little far in interpreting 'self-inflicted,' and he was completely wrong when he said there was a family disagreement."

The New York Journal-American quoted Miss Emerson as saying that everything was perfect in their married life.

"There was absolutely no discord between us," she said. "I love him very much. That should be obvious to everyone. There have been a lot of erroneous reports by disreputable columnists regarding differences over my stage career. My husband does not object to my career.

"There is no difference between Elliott and myself on that issue."

Hospital Survey Plan Is Delayed

Plans for an immediate survey of administrative practices at Alexandria Hospital struck a snag yesterday.

A spokesman for the Alexandria City Council's hospital committee disclosed that Dr. Joseph R. Clemmons, who had been sought to conduct the survey, would be unable to participate because of ill health.

The survey of the hospital's administrative set-up had been proposed by the city council recently to determine the basis for a request for more financial support from the city. It was to be accompanied by an audit of the hospital accounts which already is under way.

The council's hospital committee had asked Dr. Clemmons to conduct the survey because he made a similar study of the institution last year and, according to committee members, "is thoroughly familiar with the hospital set-up."

Dr. Clemmons was administrator and executive vice president of Roosevelt Hospital in New York when he made the local survey last year, but since has retired from the post. In a report on his survey of a year ago, he noted a number of shortcomings in the hospital's administrative program.

Opponents of the hospital's request for more municipal aid have charged that many current financial difficulties are due to the fact that the institution failed to act on recommendations made by Dr. Clemmons in his original report.

The hospital committee, a member said, is seeking the services of another hospital expert.

Mother Charged as Kidnaper Yields Child to Authorities

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—The gay holiday season will have come and gone before 3-year-old Vicki Jeanne Snyder gets back to Harrisburg, Pa., and the Christmas tree and presents she missed.

The child was surrendered to sheriff's officers here yesterday by her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. John Braget of Tacoma, Wash. Mrs. Braget said she would return to Harrisburg to fight kidnaping charges issued on the complaint of the child's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Snyder. They adopted Vicki when her parents were divorced three years ago.

"Mrs. Braget contends that she was coerced into signing the adoption papers," said Capt. W. L. Browning.

The grandparents said in Harrisburg they had given Mrs. Braget permission to take Vicki for a visit 10 miles away on December 19 with the understanding she be returned that afternoon. They said the Christmas party they had promised the child was being delayed until her arrival.

Hearst Papers Are Sued By Havenner for Libel

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP).—Representative Franck R. Havenner (D., Calif.), has filed a libel suit in Federal District Court here against the Hearst publications. He asks $250,000 general and $100,000 special damages.

The suit is based on an article printed in the San Francisco Examiner October 26, 1948, during Havenner's recent successful campaign for reelection to Congress.

Cost of Farmers' Products Drops To 2-Year Low

The cost of farm products—food and fiber—were the lowest on December 15 in almost two years—since February, 1947, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported last night.

The index for all farm commodities dropped three points in the month from November 15 to December 15, the bureau said. Lower prices for eggs, meat animals, cotton and cottonseed more than offset higher prices for oranges, rice, truck crops and Christmas turkeys.

Meanwhile in New York, Dun and Bradstreet reported that wholesale food prices dropped more than 14 per cent in 1948 after reaching an all-time peak on July 13.

Freedom Near For Man Who Slew Ill Son

Boston, Dec. 29 (U.P.)—A wealthy Pittsfield lawyer who first was sentenced to death and then to life imprisonment for the murder of his mongoloid son was made eligible for immediate freedom today after spending five years and three months in prison.

The Massachusetts Governor's council voted 6 to 3 to reduce the sentence of John F. Noxon, 52, from life to six years to life, thus making him eligible for immediate parole.

Noxon was saved from the electric chair by then Gov. Maurice J. Tobin. He won additional clemency on the recommendation of present Gov. Robert F. Bradford.

In September, 1943, Noxon was accused of electrocuting his 6-month-old son Lawrence.

Streamlined Permits

The speedup in building permit procedure recommended by Washington architects is especially important as the new fire egress regulations go into effect. The red tape binding the District Department of Building Inspections is unconscionably involved. The architects say that whereas average elapsed time between application and issuance of permits varies from 1.7 to 17 days in 15 other cities studied, in Washington it is from 21 to 104 days.

The report does not say anything that has not been apparent for a long time to builders, but the observations are strengthened by their temperate and objective character. Among specific procedural changes, the report recommends such sensible improvements as the establishment of a central information bureau for all necessary permits; a scheme whereby several sets of plans are filed so they can be checked simultaneously; the assignment of representatives of other interested agencies to the permit bureau; segregation of applications to permit the expediting of permits for simple structures; and a time limit on reviews by other divisions.

Already the recommendations are showing a healthy effect in greater efforts by the permit bureau to check on delays. As the president of the local chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Mr. Harry Barrett, has explained in a letter in this newspaper, many of the improvements have had their impetus from District officials themselves, and there seems to be a general awareness of inadequacies. The trouble is that lack of money, plus a certain amount of inertia, have prevented the "drastic overhauling" which the architects deem necessary. The present report should give officials all the reason they need for eliminating this pillar-to-post bureaucracy in the District government.

The Ruhr

The gap between the rival standpoints on the Ruhr is for the most part bridged in the six-power agreement announced in London. This is a considerable achievement. Both the British and the Americans have gone a long way to meet the French case on the Ruhr—a case which we have always felt had overwhelming merit. It would have been disastrous to any hope of a common policy in Europe or to an integrated Europe if the French position had been cold-shouldered. Yet, only a month ago such an attitude seemed set. Secretary Marshall actually implied that the French outcry was a species of politicking. Actually it came out of the French marrow, and it was put there by bitter experience with the furor teutonicus.

What the military governors provided—in an order which appeared, with a perverted genius, on November 11—was the disposition of the Ruhr properties by a future German government. Nothing in the six-power agreement changes this announcement. But, as Secretary Marshall had said, the matter will be settled when a peace treaty is negotiated. It may be taken for granted that at that time the French will renew their case for a political severance of the Ruhr. The argument in this matter is not prejudged in the London agreement. Maybe, when the peace treaty comes up for negotiation, the Ruhr may have been so integrated into the European complex that the political question will have become academic.

At any rate, the six-power Ruhr authority is endowed with powers which are so much broader than those originally contemplated that the goal of an integrated Europe is reappearing. This is where compromise is most noteworthy. Originally the Ruhr authority could only allocate the output of Ruhr plants. Now the authority is given a definite place in the general supervision of production, equipment, and investment. This is a real concession to the French, though better described as evidence of statesmanship. Daily intervention is not intended, but the military occupiers, contrary to some interpretations of the agreement, will not be unchecked overlords of the German managers. Aside from the political necessity of this supervision by the authority, it is necessary as a spur to production and improvement, though success in this respect depends, of course, upon the way in which the authority is operated.

French nervousness that development in the Ruhr might revive German militarism is assuaged by the establishment of a military security board. There is likewise a revival of the 40-year guaranty that Mr. Byrnes proffered in 1946. The French seem satisfied that these measures will allay the feeling that their allies in the presence of the Soviet menace are relaxing their interest in the demilitarization of Germany. We hope the French will seize upon this agreement as justification for joining their German zone with Bizone and will use the agreement as a weapon for integrating the Ruhr into a new Europe. For instance, why not pool the whole of western European coal and steel along with the Ruhr's. An organization is at hand in the Organization of European Economic Cooperation, the European counterpart of our ECA. The London communique hints at such a development in the comment that the agreement is intended "to promote that intimate association of their [the countries of Europe] economic life which in the last analysis alone can assure a peaceful and prosperous Europe." Confidence will replace fear as a sense of community and the instrumentalities of community are developed.

Report On Unification

In his first annual report, Secretary Forrestal makes plain some of the reasons why unification, though of sound design, is still limping along with a couple of missing cylinders. There is lack of clear-cut authority in the position of Secretary of Defense. And, since true unification cannot spring from legislation alone, there must be wider and deeper understanding that the common goal of national security is more important than any personal or service interest. We heartily subscribe to this diagnosis that Secretary Forrestal provides.

As a concession to fears that a strong Secretary of Defense might become too powerful, what actually was set up in the Unification Act was an amorphous position calling for superhuman patience and endurance. Few persons who have watched Mr. Forrestal trying to tie together formerly independent operations almost single-handed will disagree that he needs both more staff and more specific authority. He believes that with strengthened powers and an undersecretary to serve as his alter ego, there would be no reason to do away with the separate service Secretaries. We wonder. Would not their continuance as partisans of individual services encourage rather than work against division? If an undersecretary could serve as Mr. Forrestal's alter ego, could not assistant secretaries of defense in charge of the three departments fulfill the same role?

Partisanship hampers the Joint Chiefs of Staff as well as the three services. Mr. Forrestal's cure is to appoint a responsible chief either from among the present membership or as a fourth person. This leaves the door open to the selection of a single chief of staff—in our opinion, the only workable solution to planning by committee. Mr. Forrestal also would do away with the influence on the Joint Chiefs of the persopal chief of staff to the President—a recommendation we hope the President will adopt by abolishing the post altogether. The opportunity is present with the pending resignation of Admiral Leahy. The report also advocates strengthening the Joint Staff, a development which seems to us inevitable if the Joint Chiefs of Staff are to better their liaison with such important bodies as the Research and Development Board. It is imperative, in other words, that there be an increase in the number of persons whose responsibility is to the defense establishment as a whole. Mr. Forrestal has recognized this in his efforts to centralize budgetary planning, legislative liaison, public relations and personnel policy.

Inevitably the flaws in unification are more spectacular than the accomplishments. Nevertheless, the totality of the achievements that Mr. Forrestal relates simply and without gloss is impressive. Foremost, it seems to us, are the studies made by expert committees on such varied subjects as pay, military justice and reserve components. Coordinated purchases and the attempt to present a unified budget also must be listed, though whether the budget will survive attacks on it remains to be proved. Mr. Forrestal also points to the evolution of joint strategic plans and definitions of functions. Undoubtedly a great deal of hard work has gone into such efforts, but vestigial bickering indicates that if basic decisions have been reached they have not been enforced with the necessary firmness.

For the first time Mr. Forrestal officially advocates military aid to western Europe, initially on a modest scale, as a supplement to the Marshall Plan. He stresses also the importance of such items as better antisubmarine defense and a radar fence around the United States. However, his advocacy of military measures has not affected his balance, and the report shows a deep consciousness that arms are but one facet of national security. In fact, Mr. Forrestal—called military minded by his critics—actually advocates the reduction of military influence in the vital National Security Council by making the Secretary of Defense the only member representing the armed forces. This amounts to long-needed recognition of the fact that the job of the military is not to determine policy, but to fit strategy to policies decided on the highest level of Government.

Opinion Polls

The pollsters did not need a report from the Social Science Research Council to know one of the polling weaknesses that report emphasizes. The election itself was evidence enough—and as shocking to them as to anyone else—that the pollsters had become overconfident of themselves. The SSRC report's most damning section, perhaps, is that in which it says "The pollsters could have foreseen the possibility of a close contest had they looked more carefully at their data and past errors. They acted in good faith but showed poor judgment in failing to apply in 1948 what they knew about their past errors, and failing to ascertain late campaign shifts."

Among the recommendations, the three most important apply, respectively, to the techniques used by the polls, the public's understanding that poll results can never be consistently and perfectly accurate, and that much more needs to be known about methods of opinion polling and about the psychology of people in numbers if the reliability of the polls is to be increased.

On the first point, it is clear that public opinion polling by ahy sampling method is inherently open to some error. But the error can be reduced by the use of better techniques, some of them already available, and in any event is susceptible of calculation. The second point follows from this. If the public realizes the limitations of the polling technique—which it was allowed to forget before the last election—it can interpret the results with intelligent reservations. And the SSRC report strongly emphasizes that sample polls can be most useful both in election and other types of opinion surveys.

The third point is probably the most vital. Time and again the SSRC committee calls attention to lack of knowledge of how people think and act, and why. The need for more research in political science and social psychology is almost a refrain. The task is one for joint effort by the pollsters and the nonpolling authorities in those fields, and it is to be hoped that the Social Science Research Council will be able to supplement this hurry-up study of the polls with a broader and deeper investigation of the entire subject.

De Senectute

While we must deplore violence in a man of any age, and while we consider that strenuous and angry passions are especially dangerous for a man of Senator McKellar's age, we must say that if his own account of the two episodes reported in yesterday's newspapers is correct, his behavior, if not praiseworthy, was at least human and understandable. Or, not to put too fine a point on it, we are inclined to think that the two journalists who were, respectively, punched and kicked by the Senator were asking for what they got.

It was probably all right for Mr. Silliman Evans to publish in his paper, if he did publish it, that the Senator is "old and decrepit, with one foot in the grave." It was hardly the most diplomatic way of suggesting that the burdens of office may be getting a bit too heavy for the Senator and that the time had come for him to seek that dignified privacy to which, as the poet says, a man of the Senator's years is entitled. But though an editor might well consider it his painful duty to say such things, since the public interest is paramount to private feelings, to expect the object of such an attack—and especially such a man as Mr. McKellar—to be genial and magnanimous about it (as though it were, after all, only a kind of friendly game) suggests an imperfect understanding of human frailty.

The same thing might be said about Mr. Jack Anderson, the reporter who questioned Senator McKellar on this touchy subject. The question would have been quite appropriate and respectful no doubt in other times and places, as, for example, in Confucian China, where old age was held in so much veneration, or in the case of a prewar Balkan mountaineer who was being interviewed about the value of a goat's milk diet in the promotion of longevity, or even perhaps in literary correspondence with Mr. George Bernard Shaw. But in a country like ours, permeated by the Hollywood ethos, the question seems supremely tactless.

If it was important to Mr. Drew Pearson's purposes that Mr. McKellar's age be exactly established, there were doubtless other ways of discovering it. Or if there are not, Mr. Pearson, it seems to us, should have gone and asked the question himself, rather than have sent Mr. Anderson. Of course, if Mr. Anderson's version, that he asked the question "merely by way of conversation," is the correct one, then it was just another of those unfortunate solecisims, like asking a man with a toupee where he gets his hair cut, and how much he tips his barber. Mr. McKellar, of course, instead of exploding with rage as he did, should have ignored the question, and adroitly changed the subject, as the relatives of a man who has been recently hanged are supposed to do when somebody mentions the price of rope.

Keeping The Peace

Obviously the five-nation military commission appointed to see that Nicaragua and Costa Rica keep the peace does not have power of enforcement. Its authority stems from the fact that it represents the totality of the Organization of American States in the first practical implementation of the Rio Defense Treaty. That should be enough, given the willingness of Costa Rica and Nicaragua to observe the treaty they both have ratified. The very presence of an international commission should be a healthy restraint on any lingering ambitions of would-be invaders.

All American countries can take great satisfaction in the response of the inter-American security organization to Costa Rica's plea. Properly, in our opinion, it has cited Nicaragua for failure to police its borders and to put down an invasionary expedition formed on Nicaraguan territory. Certainly the tacit aid to the pretender President of Costa Rica, Rafael Calderon Guardia, has constituted the primary threat to the peace. At the same time the international body has recognized that police responsibility cuts both ways. It has admonished the Figueres government of Costa Rica to keep the nondescript Caribbean Legion in check. This group of potential revolutionaries probably has been accorded more attention than it actually warrants, but there is no doubt that its existence in Costa Rica and Guatemala is causing uneasiness elsewhere. The implied rebuke ought to bolster the reputed intention of President Figueres to keep the Legion disarmed. It is from such prompt and realistic action in minor instances of aggression that the security organization will gain strength to cope with major cases.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Ladies Of The Press

On December 24, The Washington Post carried a letter on segregation in the National Press Club. This letter, like the article in the New York Star which inspired it, mentioned only one phase of the club's segregation policy.

The club's policy is reminiscent of a sign in one of Bombay's leading hotels, which reads: "No dogs or South Africans admitted." The Press Club sign might read "No women or Negroes admitted."

Izzy Stone of the New York Star and Oliver Pilat of the New York Post have objected to the club's refusal to admit Negroes, not merely on antisegregation principles but on the ground that such discrimination handicaps the club members in their work.

It is solely on the latter ground that I, as a woman correspondent, believe the club's antifeminine attitude is open to attack. The regular club luncheons at which distinguished guests speak are part of the routine coverage most newspapers and news agencies expect of their Washington correspondents. An editor would be justified in refusing to assign a woman to Washington, knowing that she would be handicapped in her work by the anachronistic attitude of the so-called "National Press" Club.

Such segregation exists only in Washington of all the world capitals. Even the ancient and dignified Anglo-American Press Association of Paris voted down its reactionary members in 1944 and admitted women to full membership.

Probably few, if any, women would begrudge men an exclusively masculine social club, but to establish a club that pretends to represent the Nation's press, and to exclude an increasingly large segment of that press—whether they be of a different color or a different sex—would appear to be highly hypocritical.

The exclusion of women from the club occurred, I am told, after one woman failed to maintain a degree of sobriety which may be required of, but not always observed by, the male members. Without wishing to condone her unseemly behavior, one may at the same time recall a recent episode when an enthusiastic (sic) member hurled chairs 13 floors into busy 14th st.

Teaching Religion

Much is being said about just where religion should be taught to children and who is to be responsible for the doing of it. The concern seems to be with what they are being taught. The emphasis should be shifted to what they are learning. What we are taught and what we learn are two far, far different things.

To children, prayers are at best often just ritual; at worst rhythms; and not the dynamic life-giving words they were designed to be. A little boy, saying his nightly "Now I lay me down to sleep" was mumbo-jumbo from beginning to end. His aunt protested. He repeated it the same way. She said, "I can't understand one word you are saying." He answered indignantly "You aren't supposed to. God understands me and he is the one I'm praying to." She answered "I doubt it!"

Another group of children asked their mother, "Mother, why do we say 'Auntie Mamie down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep' every night?" One child recited, "He maketh me to lie down in green plasters." "What are green plasters?" he inquired.

Saying the Lord's Prayer one girl improvised, "Give us this day our stale bread."

People who are to teach religion to children should worry about what children are learning. And they must understand what it is they are trying to teach. LAURA K. POLLOCK.

Thirteenth Man

With several relatives and close friends in the armed forces, I find that there is one cheerful detail in the Air Force's rescue of the fortunate 12 from the Greenland icecap which, in my opinion, has not been sufficiently stressed. That is, the news that, among these assorted airplane and glider crews who had been assembled on the ice over the Yule season, the thirteenth man, believed to have been there, was actually not.

What glad tidings for his family and friends! What relief of tensions in the higher ranks of his service! What a warm glow to his worried commanding officer and the subordinate officers and noncoms, down through the echelons, who are not only responsible for this man's welfare and well-being but who are also his friends and comrades-in-arms! And, above all, what a glad New Year's Day it will be for the man himself who now knows that, instead of having been in peril on the icecap, he has been warm and safe at his base all the time! J. C.

Eye Bank

I hope Mr. Eames McVeigh's letter of December 23 with respect to the Eye Bank receives wide attention. For some time my husband and I have deemed it a most laudable project. However, it does seem to me, things should be made as easy as possible if the practice is to spread.

A year or so ago a notice appeared in the paper that forms could be had by calling a local eye hospital. I called and explained what I wanted, but the person to whom I should talk was out and would I call later. I did and I still could not talk to whoever it was. No one else could take my name and address for mailing the blanks.

Family illness and a number of things happened as is normal in any household and I forgot about it. I am at present convalescent from an excellent chance I recently passed up for not needing my cornea much longer. When Mr. McVeigh's letter appeared I did not want to risk forgetting again and I did not think I had the time and energy in the midst of Christmas preparations to write a letter, so I called the local hospital immediately. This time I apparently got the proper party. I explained my request. Without identifying herself she said, "Will you write me a letter making the request?"

Of course, I will write the letter. But think how many well meaning people can die off with perfectly good (and perfectly useless to them) corneas while trying to make the proper approach to this exclusive club.

Dutch Attack On Indonesia

As one not acquainted with the problem, I am amazed at the editorial statement in the New York Herald Tribune of December 20 that because the Netherlands government's economy had for centuries been closely linked to the East Indian empire, to wrest it away would be a staggering (financial) loss to the Dutch and therefore the Dutch plan—to be imposed by force—for "a substantial degree of independence," and the retention of "Dutch technical assistance in the economic and political development of the islands" might not be a bad solution of the problem. And I note that Arthur Krock in the December 21 New York Times says: "Many in this Government see large justifications for the statesmen at The Hague.

Are they perhaps the same Americans (or their successors) who used the very same arguments in 1929 in the Philippines and at home—and for many years thereafter to justify the continuance of our sovereignty there, pretending they were only concerned about the happiness and prosperity and political stability of the islands' natives, while their real purpose was to exploit the wealth of the islands for themselves?

The New York Times, in its leader of December 20, at least handled the matter frankly, stripping away the specious claim of concern for the Indonesians, when it said that the Dutch believed this "police action" was necessary "because it (the Netherlands) feels that this (the reconquest of its former colonial possessions) is essential to its survival and solvency."

The Communists have been given an issue on a silver platter. Everyone knows the United Nations is helpless. Isn't it about time for this country to take an affirmative stand, at very least cutting off all further ERP aid?

Seventeen years ago, on a mission to which I had been assigned by the Governor General of the Philippines, whose legal adviser I then was, I was entertained over New Year's by the Sultan of Jogjakarta. While there we had the opportunity to meet some of the young native intellectuals of his entourage. Practically all spoke perfect English, and many had studied in great English universities like Oxford or Cambridge.

They talked to us freely and frankly and all agreed they wanted independence for their country. At the time of our visit the treatment of the Indonesian peasants (which I had been sent to look into) was unbelievably bad. To all intents and purposes, with the exception of a few mestizos—with Dutch blood, they were treated as slaves. The Dutch planters were arrogant, avaricious and cruel.

The real basis for the "police action" is the Dutch belief (unchanged by two wars) that the world belongs to the white man alone—and especially to the Dutch.

I know we have said we trusted and relied on the U. N., but where does this contemptuous action leave it? Is it an accident that the attack occurred 10 days after the adjournment of the Assembly, when the delegates were scattering to their homes? Is it an accident that our Congress will not meet until January 3; that Mr. Truman is leaving Washington for the holidays; that Mr. Marshall is hospitalized? The Dutch figured that by the time United States opinion had formed and we were in a position to act, their "steal" would be a "fait accompli."

If the unilateral Dutch action, in violation of a solemn agreement is approved or ignored, what could we say if Russia decided it would take "police action"—without notice or consultation—to take over all Germany?

Like Holland, which feels that "police action" is essential to its continuing existence and solvency, Russia could assert its move was essential to the continuance and spread of communism.

Exchanging Prejudices

By Malvina Lindsay

Teacher Melting Pot

NOT SO MANY years ago an American discussing British public schools would likely have said something like this:

"They're antiquated. Just drill in a lot of dull facts. Don't teach children to do things. What's more, they're snobbish—play up only to the bright kids. Yes, sir, we Americans have the only real schools in the world."

A Britisher would probably have come back with this: "American children skim through everything—learn nothing thoroughly. They're always behind British children of their age. And teaching's all geared to the average—the mediocre. The bright child doesn't have a chance. I tell you, no schools anywhere can compare with the British."

But such glib, complacent criticism doesn't come from the American or British exchange teachers who in the last two years have been learning firsthand about each other's school systems. Teachers of both nationalities have generally gone home with new perspectives on the strengths and weaknesses of their own schools.

THIS BALANCING of prejudices now under way is one of the great gains of the exchange system, in the view of Miss Edith Ford, administrator of the British exchange program, who was recently in this country to confer with officials of the State Department and Office of Education. The traditional British idea of educating thoroughly a selected group, that is the bright pupils, which still hangs on despite recent educational renovations, has come up against the American idea of educating, even superficially, as many children as possible.

Both ideas are being modified, Miss Ford believes. The British are realizing they have gone too far in favoring bright pupils; the Americans are finding they have been too neglectful of this group. Miss Ford also feels the exchange will help the British to make their teaching less academic and more related to life, and also give Americans more respect for the thoroughness the British prize. From the widespread senior high school education in the United States, the British teachers expect to learn much to help them in carrying out the new free education act of their country, which affects children up to 15 years old.

Both Miss Ford and Dr. Paul Smith, administrator of the American program, regard the teacher exchange, now starting on its third year, as a tremendous success both in professional gains and in building Anglo-American friendship. American exchange teachers, Dr. Smith points out, are having the great opportunity of seeing the British working out in their own way a new approach to education. It is an approach similar to one that has long been the underlying philosophy of the American system—that children should be educated for living. American teachers also have been greatly interested in the training the British child gets in courtesy.

WHAT HAS been called the "ambassadorial side" of the teacher exchange has yielded remarkable results. British teachers have done a great deal of speaking in this country at the request of organizations. Miss Ford estimates that in the last two years the 200 British teachers in the United States made about 8000 speeches to what she calls the "heart of the people." American teachers in England also have spoken extensively and have generally lived in British families. On returning to their home countries the teachers have continued to make speeches and have kept up letter exchanges.

Plans are under way to extend the exchange to include teachers in junior colleges, teacher training colleges, institutes of technology, trade schools, schools for handicapped children. The United States has broadened its exchange to include a few French and Canadian teachers and hopes to bring more nations into the plan.

Eventually, it is hoped, an exchange of teachers, of librarians, of professional people, scientists, members of trade unions and even possibly of average families will become so great that thousands of British and Americans—and other nationals—will have opportunity for periods of living and working in each other's lands. If the exchange system is expanded, the same care in choice now applied to teachers would need to be exercised. For provincial, inflexible or chauvinistic emissaries are worse than none.

Medical Waste

The report by the Hoover Commission task force concerning medical care by Federal agencies reveals appalling waste, duplication of facilities, inefficiency and poor organization.

How can the President and Mr. Ewing sincerely support such a monstrosity as the Murray-Dingell-Wagner bill when they know it would only compound the present waste and inefficiency?

Think of the enormous benefit that would have accrued if the money already wasted had been distributed under the existing efficient machinery of the Hill-Burton Act on a matching basis. Washington, instead of getting $700,000 to aid its hospitals, would have received several times that much.

Today and Tomorrow

The Dark Prospect In Germany

THERE IS now available the material for a preliminary estimate of the progress and the prospects of the policy which proposes to set up a German government west of the Elbe, and to make western Germany a viable economy within the European Recovery Program. Just when this policy was decided upon may not be known until the records and the memoirs of this period are published. But shortly after the break-up of the Council of Foreign Ministers held in London last autumn, the United States and Great Britain took the initiative, with France consenting reluctantly, in formulating the policy. Two conferences which were held in London during the winter and spring ended with the signing of the London Agreements early in June.

Lippmann

These agreements, both those which were published and those which have not yet been published, were a body of general principles to be followed by the governments, and of instructions to Generals Clay, Robertson, and Koenig, designed to set up a regime for the Ruhr, and to create a German federal republic in western Germany, an occupation statute which would fix the legal relationship of this republic to the Western powers, and a plan by which western Germany was to become, with the help of Marshall aid, a productive and self-sufficient partner in the reconstruction of Western Europe.

DURING the past six months much work has been done to put into practice the policy formulated by the London Agreements. The Germans have been meeting in a constitutional convention, which they prefer to call the Parliamentary Council, and their deliberations are interesting and significant. The Military Governors have been negotiating the text of the Occupation Statute which will in fact be the supreme law of western Germany, and their disagreements are now for Washington, London, and Paris to resolve. Finally, we know the results of the currency reform, and there exists a plan, now in the hands of the Marshall aid countries, which is supposed to show how the economy of western Germany is to become prosperous and solvent.

These three parallel developments need to be studied together. When they are, not only those who have had great hopes but also those who had great fears of the policy of the London agreements, will find themselves asking not what will happen if the policy succeeds but what will happen, as seems so highly probable, if the policy works very badly indeed.

THE Parliamentary Council at Bonn was opened last September with a speech by Prof. Carlo Schmid, the leader of the socialists in the constitutional convention. Professor Schmid is the most influential member of the committee which drafted the so-called Chiemsee Report, the preliminary working paper of the convention. (In Western Germany the party division is rather definitely fixed at 40 per cent Socialists, 40 per cent Christian Democrats, about 10 per cent Communists, the rest Conservatives.)

Professor Schmid told the Council that the document they were going to prepare could not be a constitution: "The German people, being under an alien occupation, are not free to form both a constitution; on the contrary what they are going to do is imposed on them by external compulsion. Such imposed documents may be technically good but they are not, democratically making, constitutions." Then he exclaimed that "the revolutions of 1830," fifteen years after the end of the Napoleonic wars, were nothing but the revolt of the peoples of Europe against imposed constitutions."

PROFESSOR SCHMID went on to tell the constitutional convention that since they were acting under "external compulsion" the government they would create could be only "the apparatus of domination". When a people, he said, "has to organize under alien rule and subject to their approval, it does not constitute itself unless it does so against the alien rule itself."

There we have, quite candidly set forth, what the Germans, our strongly anti-Communist Germans in the western zones, think of this western German state we have invited, indeed pushed them, to form. When Professor Schmid spoke in September, he had not seen the text of the occupation statute under which the government in which his Socialist Party will be much the strongest element, is to live. When the western Germans see that statute, they will find set down in black and white the bald and inescapable fact that it is impossible to have democratic self-government under military occupation. It will demonstrate to the Germans that all power is reserved by their conquerors, and that they have no real power themselves.

So it would be idle to think, as some of the more naive of our officials do, that the new German government, lacking real power, will take the responsibility for the solution of Germany's problems. The main concern of Germans who participate in this government, as I have pretty good reason to know from intimate talks I had with a few of them, will be to prove to the German people that they are not collaborators, a Vichy government, and a collection of Quislings.

One of the most eminent of the German leaders in our zone is already in the unhappy position where his son refuses to talk with him because the son feels that the father is working with the enemy who made such a shambles of almost every important German city.

THIS NEW government, we must realize, cannot have legal legitimacy or moral authority in the eyes of the great mass of the Germans. Yet it will be asked to govern a German territory in which all the economic and social conflicts and problems that exist in Great Britain, France, and Italy, are present in an infinitely more difficult form. There are about the same number of people in western Germany as there are people in the United Kingdom and, like the British, they must import a large part of their food and raw materials. Yet the British with their strong institutions, their great tradition of freedom and solidarity, their relations with the empire and the Continent, are able to manage only with a sustained effort which is unique in the experience of free people. Anyone who thinks the Frankfurt government, if and when it is set up, can come anywhere near to duplicating the British effort should be given the Nobel Prize for wishful thinking.

The fact is that the rise in German production following the currency reform last summer has already—I say this on the best possible authority—hit the ceiling fixed by the limitation of power and skilled labor. The rise was probably not so great as the official statistics said it was. For a considerable amount of German production used to go into the black market and was not recorded. Nevertheless, there has been a substantial increase. Yet western Germany, with a much larger population than in 1936, has now got only to 75-80 per cent of 1936 in production. That is quite insufficent to afford a satisfactory standard of life, and insufficient to prevent a new inflation despite the currency reform. It will take, I was told on the same authority, three to five years of heavy capital investment to raise the physical ceiling on German productivity.

THE NEW government at Frankfurt will be born into trouble—compelled to live and deal with a German economy in which the standard of life is very low, and the struggle for existence bitter and ruthless among the industrialists, the workers, the peasants, and the salaried officials, teachers, ex-soldiers. What will the German politicians do, faced as they are sure to be by insoluable difficulties? They will, of course, blame the alien conquerors who live among them in remarkable comfort and, by German standards, with conspicuous luxury.

This tendency is already quite clearly evident. The governments of the Laender, like all governments in Europe, are faced with the problem of inflation. The evasion of taxes and the faking of accounts has meant that since the currency reform, which made German money valuable again, only a small proportion of taxes has been collected. Without great authority and integrity of government it is hard to collect taxes, as we know from France and Italy. The German governments, and this will be even more pertinent to the central government at Frankfurt, do not have real authority. So what have the German newspapers and politicians done? The most obvious thing. They are making a campaign against the cost of the occupation, and, there is reason to think, that some of the states have shown deficits in their budgets in order to prove their case against the costs of the occupation.

THIS IS only a straw in the wind. But I venture to say that by creating prematurely, and under humiliating conditions, a democratic German government to deal with impossibly difficult problems, we shall bring about two unhappy results.

We shall have made it almost inevitable that the ideas of democracy will be discredited once more among the rising generation of Germans.

And, as this misconceived experiment proceeds, we shall find that our relations with Germany become more and more an entanglement—though on a vaster scale and with more malignant consequences—like our entanglement in Greece.

For in Germany as in Greece, we shall have to provide more support as our influence diminishes, and in the morbid condition which will result from our attempt to occupy a part of Germany, and yet not to govern it though we continue to rule it, we shall be sucked into the angry whirlpool of the German passions, which are the aftermath of Nazism and of a defeat that has destroyed more of German civilization than it has of the German potential for violence.

Revolt In The House

WHILE the steamroller of regularity may finally flatten out the rebels among both Democrats and Republicans in the new Congress, that will not happen without a struggle. The shrieks of pain and rage will be heard well beyond the borders of this conservative and tradition-bound Capital.

Childs

Both within the new Democratic majority and the Republican minority the yeast of rebellion is working. Able and articulate men and women are determined that the old order shall not prevail.

Thus far, the Republican rebels have made more noise than the dissenters on the Democratic side.

The blast by Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky blaming the reactionary Republican leadership of the Eightieth Congress for the November 2 defeat expressed what many others have longed to say. Because he himself was defeated, Cooper felt free to speak out.

Speaking in Cincinnati before the Association of American Law Schools, that perennial rebel, Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, went all out for democratizing the rules of Congress, including doing away with the congressional sacred cow—the seniority system. By that seniority system, members, regardless of their ability, can ride the escalator to key committee chairmanships.

MORSE quickly added that he was well aware that the odds against bringing about any of these changes were perhaps a 1000 to 1. But it is also true, as he pointed out, that the public is becoming more and more aroused by the antediluvian procedures that keep Congress back in the mud of the horse-and-buggy days. A National Committee for Strengthening Congress, representing almost every shade of opinion from Winthrop Aldrich of the Chase National Bank to James Carey of the CIO, is calling for basic changes.

The Democratic rebels have made considerably less noise, perhaps because they are in the majority and, therefore, must accept responsibility. They are, however, just as determined to try to abolish the traffic obstructions that get in the way of Democratic action.

Here, of course, a delicate bit of business comes in. On the opening day, before Congress has adopted its rules, almost anything can happen under ordinary parliamentary procedure.

The Democratic majority in the House will hold its caucus on New Year's Day. If the rebels, who want to abolish the veto of the Rules Committee and make sure that all committee posts do not go to Southerners, have their way, then on January 3 the leadership will be in for a Kilkenny fight that could have serious consequences in the new Congress.

Republicans would in almost certainty join the Democratic rebels. The new Speaker, Sam Rayburn, would find himself repudiated at the beginning of what is certain in any event to be a stormy assignment.

FOR THIS reason, Rayburn is likely to carry the day even with those who are convinced that reforms are necessary. What the moderates hope is that, in return, Rayburn will agree to back minimum changes once he has asserted his leadership.

The rock-bottom minimum the reformers expect is the abolition of the veto power of the Rules Committee. That veto has been used again and again to block legislation approved by other committees that have carefully studied it.

The veto exercised by the little group of dictators comprising the Rules Committee could be ended by a fairly simple change. The absolute power to block and obstruct would be amended to provide that if the committee failed to report out within a period of 10 or 15 days legislation already approved by another committee, then a majority vote of the House would bring the legislation to the floor.

Inevitably, personalities play a part. The new chairman of the Rules Committee will be Representative Adolph Sabath of Illinois, who will be 83 years old next year. Sabath, a New Dealer, is expected to cooperate in the Truman program.

But next in line is Representative Eugene Cox of Georgia. Cox is a die-hard Tory whose blocking tactics as chairman would make the Republican regime seem like a carnival of liberalism.

As leader of the House group that carried out the reorganization of Congress, Representative Mike Monroney of Oklahoma fought for abolishing the tyranny of the Rules Committee. He and other moderates may be able this time to add that reform to the good beginning they made.

Richmond Is Example

Efficiency of VA Catching Up With Work Load of Insurance

(Third of a Series)

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Eight months ago, Branch No. 4 of the Veterans' Administration at Richmond, Va., was swamped with 45,000 letters a month from veterans angry or puzzled about their National Service Life Insurance.

Last month the total was 10,000 letters on all insurance subjects and the decline shows indications of continuing.

In July, 1947, the Richmond branch had 7000 insurance cases on hand which, for one reason or another, were incomplete or otherwise fouled up. Last November it had only 304 such cases pending, and had reduced the time of processing its cases from as much as 30 days to an average of 5 days each.

Even so, at least half of its current pending cases are held up because veterans have moved without notifying VA, and their records must be transferred from other offices. Many delays result also from failure of veterans to fill out forms properly.

Average for Country

The Richmond Branch office, which serves the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, was selected for study because its volume of business, its efficiency and the status of its insurance cases is about average for the country. A few branches are doing a little better and a few are doing a little worse; there is not a great deal of difference, in any event.

In November, this office had 186,803 term policies in force, with a value of $1,433,000,000 and 71,014 converted policies valued at $347,000,000, a total of 257,817 policies, with a total value of $1,780,000,000. The value of the average term policy was $7681 and the average converted policy was $4888.

Conversions from term to permanent policies hit a peak of 7000 in April, 1948, and gradually eased off to the rate of 500 a month last November. Thus the heaviest flood of conversions struck before the office was entirely out of the confusion incident to organizing and training its employes.

2054 Cases Surveyed

A few months ago the office surveyed 2054 permanent-plan cases, from ages 17 to 61, selected at random, and 1552 term-plan cases selected the same way. It found that of the permanent-plan cases, 593 were paying premiums annually, 257 semiannually, 366 quarterly, and 838 monthly. Of permanent-plan policyholders, 313 chose ordinary life insurance, 1113 favored the 20-pay plan, 385 the 30-pay plan, 130 bought 20-year endowment policies, 81 preferred endowment at age 60, and 32 endowment at age 65.

Among the term-policy holders, 1350 were paying their premiums monthly, 75 quarterly, 59 semiannually, and 68 annually. This means that nearly half the permanent-plan policies and more than four fifths of the term policies require 12 bookkeeping operations a year to keep their premium payments collected and properly credited. The majority of commercial insurance, except industrial policies, is carried on an annual, semiannual or quarterly basis.

More Than One Policy

To complicate matters, many veterans carry more than one policy on which they pay monthly premiums. An extreme is the case of one man who carries $10,000 of insurance in 10 policies of $1000 each, making monthly premium payments on each policy. This calls for 120 bookkeeping operations a year to keep his account current and some day will require correspondence, adjudication and settlement with 10 beneficiaries.

In all, the Richmond office receives, posts and carries accounts for a total of 150,000 mail remittances each month, and handles 12,000 monthly deductions from compensation paid to disabled veterans. Heavy as it is, this load has decreased since the days of decentralization and immediately afterward, when records were scattered from one end of the country to the other, help was totally untrained and veterans were moving about and converting their policies at a much greater rate than now.

Handles All Benefits

Furthermore, the Richmond branch office, like the other 12, was set up to handle not insurance alone but all other veterans, benefits—disability compensation, business and housing loans, education and training, hospitalization, and pensions. Its insurance division had to compete for employes and office space with all the others.

It is not surprising, then, that in January, 1947, premiums reaching the office but still not posted to the proper accounts at the end of the month rose as high as 60,000. What may be considered remarkable, under the circumstances, is that last November the total of payments unposted at the end of the month was a round zero.

The current average time from receipt of a premium payment to posting to the veteran's account is three days. The time is slightly greater, of course, immediately after the first of each month and between the 23rd and the 28th. This latter peak is due to the fact that premium notices are mailed on the 20th of the month before they are payable, and many veterans send in their remittances at once. Even this presumably creditable reaction has its drawbacks.

Paying Month Ahead

There is the case, for instance, of the Roanoke, Va., veteran who wrote a blistering letter to the Richmond office accusing it of the "usual" inefficiency because he was receiving premium receipts before the premium was due. Investigation showed that he was paying his premiums a month in advance without realizing it. Straightening him out added considerably to the 10,000 letters a month received by the insurance section of the Richmond office.

Although decentralization to branch offices was supposed to have been completed by the end of September, 1946, the process has not yet been entirely accomplished. A load of 750,000 cases was dumped on the Richmond office in September, 1946. In December of that year another 100,000 arrived.

Throughout 1947, cases continued to come in as the confuson unraveled itself, these new cases amounting sometimes to as many as 10,000 a month. Even now an occasional case trickles in, and now and then a search must be made through all 12 branch offices for one case which was supposed to have reached Richmond long ago.

Work Systematized

All this work has become thoroughly systematized now, and every remittance, every piece of correspondence and every receipt follows well-defined channels and is handled by men and women who understand precisely what to do with them. Two years ago things were vastly different.

When the Richmond branch office opened in 1946 it needed more than 750 employes and a lot of office space. It got both the hard way.

This office now has 785 employes, only 40 of whom originally had any insurance experience and many of whom never had done office work. It occupies two buildings, one a converted tobacco factory at 900 N. Lombardy st., and the other in sprawling McGuire Hospital 5 miles away across the James River.

Although its employes have learned their business and communications between its buildings have been worked out to a fine point, human errors still occur now and then. It is noteworthy that these have become very few indeed.

Dulin to 'Fight Like Devil' Against Roadside Controls

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—It will be State's rights against county rights in General Assembly debate over roadside control.

For the third time in four years, the Legislature next month will consider a bill to give the State increased powers to regulate the growth of billboards and hot-dog stands along Maryland highways.

The measure "is aimed only at Anne Arundel County," says State Senator Wilbur R. Dulin, Democratic leader of the county delegation. "I'm going to fight like the devil against any State-wide control over our roads."

As approved by the Legislative Council—interim committee of State legislators—the bill is a modified version of measures killed by the General Assembly in 1945 and 1947.

The Maryland Roadside Council, created by an act of 1943 to help preserve the natural beauty of State highways, gave its explanation in a report last year:

"Strong opposition developed to any roadside control bill in 1945, practically all of it quietly engineered by some badly advised commercial interests, who stirred up farmers and roadside property owners by giving them false advice as to the meaning of the legislation."

The latest bill would give the State Roads Commission power to designate any key artery as a "roadside protected highway." The commission could regulate commercial establishments in a zone 200 feet back from the right of way on either side.

One clause waters down the State's authority. It gives county zoning regulations precedence over any conflicting State Roads Commission regulations.

Anne Arundel is one of five counties that have set up their own highway zoning regulations. Others are Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Baltimore Counties.

German Owners Asking Congress To Save Plants

By The Associated Press

Owners of industries in western Germany are appealing directly to Congress to prevent dismantling of their plants.

One Senator protested against "any lobbying by our former enemies and defeated Nazi industrialists."

But Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) told a reporter he saw "no objection to a conquered nation or its citizens appealing to Congress by our traditional method of petition."

"We are dominating Germany, and they shoud have the right of petition," he added. "I'm against dismantling German plants to send them to Soviet Russia or her satellites and then asking our taxpayers to replace them under the Marshall Plan."

An usual appeal came through airmailed letters and pamphlets by the Toussaint & Hesse factory of Dusseldorf. The company said its plant is earmarked for dismantling although this would "cross the purpose of the Marshall Plan" for European recovery.

A Professional Photographer Takes a Look at Television—and Approves It

By Ollie Atkins

WHAT does the photographer think of the television image? Does a knowledge of photographic principles assist one in the use of his TV set? Can the average photographer learn anything from studying television reproductions?

To help me answer the above questions, Samuel Pollock of Pollock & Zentz in Arlington sent over a small Admiral set and after a week of viewing television shows I feel able to express my observations from a strictly photographic viewpoint.

The actual picture the TV set reproduces in your home is far from perfect as salon mondchrome studios go. It lacks perfect composition because all images must be horizontal (same is true of the movies, of course) and the nature of the signal which forms the image on the TV screen makes detail hard to reproduce, especially if it does not present much contrast in coloration.

The image is good enough to enable one to see and recognize individuals and in most cases you can see details in their clothing. It is also good enough to get an entire family, including children, to sit down all evening and watch the TV image with no complaints.

Lighting on most television shows can stand a lot of improvement. Having actually appeared on a couple of the DuMont shows in New York I know that a terrific amount of light is required for studio productions. Between my first and second shows some progress had been made in allowing less light to illuminate the scenes and just that much less heat reflected on the heads of TV actors.

On the whole, television lighting is flat. In photography, and we now include television, flat lighting is very undramatic and boring. Definite progress in recent months on TV productions has produced better lighting with stronger top lights giving some facial modeling. A lot must be learned yet by the TV lighting experts, though, to make TV photography approach film effects.

Baby must be able to sit up without falling off the table and Daddy must be a patient photographer, but even with a mere box camera such a picture as this is possible if shot against the strong north light of a window

Positive sympathy must be bestowed on the TV boys as you remember that stage lighting itself is usually not photogenic on monochrome or color films. Then, too, actors wander all over the TV set and special lighting effects cannot dramatize them at all times under these conditions.

Reproduction of movies on TV facilities seems to be very flat. As in any photography, copies of other pictures tend to flatten them—but it is too much so in TV reproduction. However, I must admit I sat through several full-length features and enjoyed them.

A knowledge of focusing and darkroom printing techniques in selecting and printing proper contrasts of paper will help one in using a television set. A correct touch in focusing the TV image is essential and easily perfected. A single knob on the face of the set allows you to accomplish this. But selection of good contrast requires proper contrast taste. Most people will tend to use too much contrast making the faces and white objects appear washed out and blacks will be too dark. Practice will perfect this for the ordinary viewer but the photographer already recognizes proper contrast effects and will tune it in readily.

From a study of television images the average photographer will quickly learn that he has been shooting too many distance views and not nearly enough close-ups. He will also realize that mere scenes without human or animal life become most boring.

I must say that with its defects, when compared with good photographic images, I still enjoy my TV loan set and may buy the thing—if my kids have anything to say about it I may as well write out the check immediately.

LIEUT. H. K. GRIFFIN, JR., District Public Information officer for the United States Navy, at the Naval Gun Factory here, tells me the Navy this year will conduct a comprehensive picture contest for Navy, Marine and Coast Guard Photogs. Both on and off duty pictures may be submitted. In general the classification of prints will include landscapes and architecture any where in the world; people and customs; general pictorial subjects and color transparencies.

ALL photographic credentials for working photographers covering the Inauguration are being handled by the White House Photographers Association. Inquiries should be addressed to Arthur E. Scott, Secretary, White House News Photographers Association, Press Room, The White House.

Photographers are invited to submit prints to the Rochester International Salon of Photography. Closing date for entries is February 3. Entry blanks may be obtained by writing to David Adams, Rochester International Salon of Photography, Memorial Art Gallery, Rochester 7, N. Y.

Says Charles A. Kinsley, prominent photographer and salon judge, "The quickest way to achieve a rejection is to submit a photograph which causes the judge to say: 'So What?'"

One on the Aisle—

Flaherty Strikes Oil—on Celluloid

By Richard L. Coe

A GENIAL, WHITE-HAIRED man pulled his hand from his pocket and offered us some sunflower seeds. "They're wonderful to munch on," he said. "I'm never without them."

And wonderful to munch on they were, too, and the man with the simple, natural charm who offered them is also pretty wonderful—Robert Flaherty, a man known and loved throughout the world for having caught the dignity of simple things on film.

Nearly 35 years ago Flaherty, an engineer and explorer, decided from his Eskimo travels that a camera should tell the world of what he had seen in the North Country. He went to Rochester, learned how to use a movie camera and returned to the sub-Arctic. A year later, while editing his film in Toronto, his cigarette destroyed all 70,000 feet of celluloid. He talked Revillon Freres, the New York furriers, into giving him a grant to reshoot his record.

When he finished, in 1922, he called his picture "Nanook of the North," a classic film which was to win him recognition as "The Father of the Documentary." He took his camera to the South Seas for "Moana," to that lonely little island off the coast of Ireland for "Man of Aran," to India for "Elephant Boy."

Now this man whose works already have outlived most colossal, stupendous efforts of the West Coast cloak-and-suiters, has fathered another film, "Louisiana Story," a picture of the coming of an oil well to the back bayous of the Pelican State. He talked of it and many other things yesterday at the Playhouse, where his picture will open a run Wednesday, January 5.

Money Still the Bugaboo

For all his success in the documentary field, Flaherty still finds that his biggest problem is money, which shows that he has just one more thing in common with the rest of us.

"Louisiana Story," for instance, was financed by Standard Oil of New Jersey, though there's not a line of written or spoken credit in his film to say so. The Rockefeller offshoot tossed in over a quarter of a million, and one only wishes Ida Tarbell and others of the muckraking era were alive to enjoy this subtle largesse of the octopus. No angel ever gave heaven so sleek a public relations job.

Though the oil company footed the bill for more than 300,000 feet of film, "Louisiana Story," which consumes only 8000 of that footage, remains Flaherty's property; from the rest he has made two short subjects which Standard is using for commercial purposes of its own.

Nor has his success in making people round the world realize that all are kin blinded him to the commercial side of movie-making. No one knows better than he that exhibitors shy and will continue to shy from his pictures, which boast no box office stars. "Even on double bills," he says, "they simply hold up the seat turnover so important to the exhibitors."

Expects Television Aid

While he sees some slight hope in showing films without mass appeal in small theaters such as the Playhouse, he feels that for the choosy filmgoer, television may be the answer.

"Documentaries," he says, "haven't begun to be what they could be. They're a fine art form, but they need a segregated audience. We must separate the sheep from the goats. Television will do the segregating, I think."

The type of television he refers to is a scheme whereby specific pictures may be piped into the home over the telephone lines, with the cost of your entertainment winding up on your phone bill. He's not speaking of televised entertainment as radio-conditioned listeners consider it.

What next for Flaherty? He says he just doesn't know. His practice is to move in on a territory, get to know its people and its ways. He works out a script with his wife, Frances, and picks his players (never professional actors) by combing the locale for just the right people, who must be unself-conscious as well as indigenous to the place.

Years ago he said, and at 64, still says: "I try to make my films a revelation of a country and of the people who live in it. There is a kernel of greatness in all peoples. It is up to the film maker to find the one incident or even the one movement that makes it clear."

Which is why the arrival of "Louisiana Story" will be an event next week at the Playhouse.

LOCALITIES contributed extra-curricular activities yesterday to the American Educational Theater Association convention . . . Rose Robison Cowen, that attractive, lively director of the Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Arts, hostessed delegates at her children's television show at 5 o'clock over WNBW from the Wardman Park and found many a conventioner interested in the strides she's made in the new medium . . . American University's Radio Workshop telecast a Gordon Bligh mystery . . . Catholic University's Players returned from their vacation early to give a special performance of "The Birds" in the campus theater . . . Today's final sessions bring a discussion on "The American Theater Scene" this morning at 9 by Robert Breen, executive secretary of ANTA; Rosamond Gilder, the critic now with the United States center of International Theater, Strawhat bigwig Theron Bamberger, Campton Bell of the University of Denver and H. Darkes Albright of AETA.

TEN-YEAR-OLD CLINCH—Ann Sheridan and Jimmy Cagney exhibit love as practiced 10 years ago in "Angels With Dirty Faces," which is being reissued on the Metropolitan screen starting this morning. Pat O'Brien and Humphrey Bogart are the other stars

Group Asks Belasco For Plays

President Truman was asked yesterday to release the Belasco Theater for use as a legitimate playhouse under direction of the American National Theater and Academy.

The request was made in a resolution adopted at a session of the American Educational Theater Association, now holding its annual convention in the Statler Hotel.

The Belasco, which faces on Lafayette Square, has been used by the Treasury Department for office and warehouse purposes since 1946.

The Federal Works Agency opened sealed bids on the theater last June, but insisted that bidders agree to vacate the premises on a year's notice.

Bids received then from the American National Theater and Academy, and from Joseph Curtis of New York were rejected because of "unacceptable riders." Both bidders asked the Government to agree to reimburse them for unamortized renovation costs if the lease were canceled before ten years.

I'm a theatre manager, and each year I play a great many fine pictures, but I'm particularly proud to present M-G-M's unusual Technicolor musical 'Words and Music'.

At its gala premiere in New York, 'Words and Music' delighted audiences with its 22 Rodgers and Hart songs, and a love story as thrilling as the words, a romance as unforgettable as the music! It really takes a look at the lives of those young, gay and gifted songwriters, Rodgers and Hart.

And it brings you spectacular entertainment with such stars as June Allyson, Perry Como, Judy Garland, Lena Horne, Gene Kelly, Mickey Rooney and Ann Sothern. Also Tom Drake, Cyd Charisse, Betty Garrett, Janet Leigh, Marshall Thompson, Mel Torme and Vera-Ellen! Fourteen stars in all!

And the roster of Rodgers and Hart songs includes such favorites as 'With A Song In My Heart', 'Blue Moon', 'Where Or When' and 'The Lady Is A Tramp'.

I urge you not to miss this wonderful M-G-M musical!

O. J. Ratto
Manager

Director Norman Taurog did the dramatic sequences, Robert Alton staged the musical numbers and Arthur Freed produced. The story is by Guy Bolton and Jean Holloway, the screen play by Fred Finklehoffe, and Ben Feiner, Jr., did the adaptation.

Lakers Hand Caps Spanking, 91-68

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NEW ORLEANS, DEC. 29.—When Oklahoma came out of its huddle for another crack at the Santa Clara line that was giving 'em a hard time of it earlier in the season, Quarterback Jack Mitchell started rattling off the signals, and then broke it off with a yell of "check."

POVICH

Out the window went the play Oklahoma had conceived in the huddle. Right Halfback George Thomas wasn't going to hit over right guard on a hand-off from Mitchell. Oklahoma's quarterback didn't like the set-up of the Santa Clara defense. That big Santa Clara line-backer, who had been messing up Oklahoma line bucks all day, was plugging the hole behind guard and drooling at the prospect of stopping another Oklahoma smash.

Before his allotted 25 seconds between plays ran out, Mitchell engineered a switch. Calling the signals orally for a new play, he alerted Thomas and his line for a charge outside right tackle, not over right guard. That would give Right Tackle Wade Walker, a good one, a perfect blocking angle on Santa Clara's backer-up. Mitchell handed off to Thomas, Walker put the crusher on the backer-up. Thomas banged outside right tackle 82 yards to a touchdown.

JACK MITCHELL—he's the guy who makes the Oklahoma attack move, and the biggest asset Oklahoma will take into the Sugar Bowl game against North Carolina on Saturday. He's Oklahoma's thinker, the fellow they look to, and believe in. Against T. C. U., he switched signals on an average of four out of five plays, and got Oklahoma home in front, 21-18. He's not only a tactician, in school he's majoring in psychology.

But Mitchell doesn't ask his Oklahoma pals to do anything he can't do himself. He's the quarterback, the passer, the punt-return man and the No. 2 runner of the backfield. In fact, he's the running-est T-formation quarterback in football, college or pro. He hands off, or he doesn't hand off, and he has scored 10 touchdowns himself, running, this season. He's the biggest reason Oklahoma is the high-est-scoring bowl team in the Nation.

North Carolina's ends will catch it from Mitchell, who isn't content to spin and hand off like the lazy T-formation quarterbacks. He shuttles close up to the line with the ball, and has a passion for optional plays that wind up either with a pitch-out outside or a smash by himself inside the end, depending on that character's reaction to the whole business. Down in Texas they're still moaning that Oklahoma kidnaped Mitchell, who played a few minutes of fresh-man football for Texas U.

THIS OKLAHOMA team is Bud Wilkinson's answer to the pass-crazy football teams of this generation. They almost never throw a pass. Against Texas, they threw only one pass all day. In another game, they threw only five. They pass only when the opposition starts mussing up their running game. Their running is tricky. They've averaged nearly five fumbles a game. But Wilkinson isn't grieved by that. He expects it. It's the penalty of the split-T with its tricky ball-handling.

Oklahoma is probably the only team in the country that can show more yards gained, 936, on punt returns that it can show from its forward passes, only 838 yards. Mitchell himself has run back four punts for touchdowns. They play the double-safety on punts with Mitchell and Darrell Royal handing off to each other as suits their whim, and they were the thrill team of the Big Seven conference.

But Coach Wilkinson is panicked at the thought of a wet field on Saturday. He barely scraped past Oklahoma A. and M., 19-15, in their last game, played in the mud. Wet footing raises bob with the precise ball-handling and fancy behind-the-line pitchouts of the Okla-homa offense. "If it's raining Saturday, we might just as well pack up and go home, and concede to Carolina," he says. "If it's a dry field, we'll stay, and probably win."

THE ONLY other major schools to use the split T, with the line-men spaced from 2 to 4 feet apart, are Maryland and Missouri. Wil-kinson concedes it's a handicap to a passing game, affording scant protection to the passer, but he likes the blocking angle it gives his linemen on running plays. Only Army, Notre Dame and Michigan State have gained more yards rushing than Oklahoma this year. The Sooners have averaged 296 yards per game running the ball.

Oklahoma clicked furiously in three consecutive games toward the end of the season. They were supposed to have it rough against Missouri, but won that one, 41-7. The next week they licked Nebraska, 41-14. A week later they ran wild against Kansas, 60-7. Against the only two single-wing teams they've met, Kansas State and Nebraska, they yielded only 14 points and rolled up 84 them-selves. Carolina, of course, is single-wing.

The trouble is, today, at least, Oklahoma will be meeting in Caro-lina a club that has permitted only two touchdotwns, rushing, against it all year. That's what you have in the Sugar Bowl—a tremendous running team against a Carolina line that has never been shoved around, and just dotes on those fumbles. It ought to be a beaut.

Mikan Sinks 34 Points For Record Crowd, 9431

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29.—There wasn't a thing Minneapolis could do about Bones McKinney's pot shot but the rest of the Wash-ington Caps couldn't help much and they dropped their fourth—and worst—decision of the season here tonight.

The score was 91 to 68 before the biggest pro basketball crowd Minneapolis has ever seen, 9431.

McKinney, of course, was un-stoppable with his overhead shot, and he wound up with eight of them for 20 points.

But George Mikan and Jim Pol-lard led the Lakers through a shaky first quarter. After that, the Caps trailed farther and farther each minute.

Except for McKinney's bucket in the first minute and after Fred Scolari's hook shot made it 22 to 21 at the start of the second period, Minneapolis led all the way.

Kleggie Hermsen, who was pitted against Mikan from the start, had to be a little cagey after collecting three fouls in the first period, and McKinney shifted over to take some of the guarding burden off his shoulders.

That didn't help much, though, as Mikan wound up with 34 points. Pollard hit 16.

The defeat, which didn't worry Coach Red Auerbach much except for the Caps' low scoring percent-age, left Washington with an .880 percentage, and still riding the crest of the Eastern division of the Basketball Association of America.

Minneapolis led by 47 to 37 at the half with McKinney's 15 points holding up his end of it.

Bill Veeck Sees Breeze for Tribe

By Hal Wood

SAN DIEGO, CALIF., Dec. 28 (U.P.).—In a few thousand well-chosen words, President Bill Veeck of the world champion Cleve-land Indians today predicted:

1. Cleveland would win the 1949 American League pennant by at least 10 games.

2. Bob Feller would have his greatest season on the mound next year.

3. Satchel Paige, the ancient Negro hurler, was good for at least two or three more years in the majors—possibly could hurl there indefinitely.

4. Stanley (Bucky) Harris, deposed manager of the Yankees signed by Veeck to manage the San Diego Padres next year, would make his way back to the major leagues.

5. Larry Doby, the fine young Cleveland Negro outfielder, would become the greatest outer-gardener in the big time.

6. That his organization, with the proper cooperation from the San Diego executives, would make the Padres a pennant threat in the Pacific Coast League.

7. Don Black, the ill-fated Cleveland hurler, never would pitch another game of baseball.

8. Steve Gromek would win more games than any other Cleveland hurler in 1949.

ELABORATING ON THE CASE of Feller, Veeck said that they had not yet signed a contract for 1949, but that he anticipates no trouble.

He said that Feller's straight-salary contract would not be cut, but that it was probable Bullet Bob would be forced to take a reduction on the bonus plan that paid him in the neighborhood of $80,000 last year.

"Feller is easy to do business with," said Veeck. "In all our contractual discussions I don't believe we've spent more than five minutes in conversation."

Referring to item No. 3—Paige—Veeck said the ancient Negro probably was in the neighborhood of 50 years old.

"He told me," said the Cleveland president, "that he was older than any age I cared to estimate."

Veeck termed Harris one of the two or three really great managers in baseball today.

"He's a fighter and he didn't take the step down to the minors to stay there," said Sports-Shirt Bill. "You watch—he'll be back up there in a key spot attempting to make the Yankee executives who fired him eat their words."

He skirted the issue of the Pacific Coast League's demand for a $25,000 tag on drafted players.

"It's just an exchange of dollars," he said. "If we give $25,000 on the draft price, then we'll demand $25,000 on players we sell back to the league."

Oklahoma A-M Wins Tourney From Baylor

Oklahoma City, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Oklahoma Aggies, dogged by Baylor in a gruelling battle that saw the teams within three points of each other the entire second half, won their fifth straight All College basketball tournament here tonight. The score was 39-36.

Oklahoma City, Dec. 29 (AP).—The University of Texas won third place in the All College basketball tournament here to-night—running over a game but outclassed Alabama squad, 60-39.

They played before a sell-out crowd of 5000 in Municipal Audi-torium.

The contest preceded the title clash between Oklahoma A. and M., seeking a fifth straight title, and Baylor University.

Colorado A. and M. won the con-solation crown in the afternoon session, edging Texas Tech, 59-58, in a thriller. Earlier, Southern Methodist ran over Auburn, 59-41, to decide the tourney's seventh place.

Tuero Climbs In Sugar Bowl

New Orleans, Dec. 29 (AP).—Jack Tuero of New Orleans defeated Fred Kovaleski, Detroit, Mich., 5—7, 6—1, 6—4, in the best of two first-round matches completed today in the Sugar Bowl tennis tournament.

Art Larsen of San Francisco easily disposed of Dick Mouledous, New Orleans, 6—2, 6—2, while fourth-seeded Gardiner Mulloy, Miami, Fla., and Ricardo Balbiers, Chile, South America, had one set each when play ended for the day.

Top-seeded Ted Schroeder led Richard Savitt, Orange, N. J., 6—2, 5—3, when play was called.

New Headgear Protects CU Boxers' Eyes

There won't be any bells tolling in the ears of Catholic University boxers this year.

Nor mashed eyebrows nor cauli-flower ears either for Coach Eddie LaFond says he has a new gadget that's gonna eliminate those occu-pational hazards for his gladiators. It's a kind of a headpiece.

Designed by DeWitt Portal, box-ing coach at San Jose State Col-lege, California, the headpiece is recommended as standard equip-ment by the National Association of College Boxing Coaches. It can be worn in a team match only by mutual consent, but the 1949 rule book urges its universal use.

Coach Eddie LaFond last night said Coaches Heinie Miller of Maryland, Marty Gallagher of Georgetown and H. L. Matthews of The Citadel already have okayed the headgear for their matches with the Cardinals. The C. U. coach is completely sold on the idea.

"It's something we've needed for a long time," said LaFond. "We'll still have plenty of action in the ring, but we won't have the cut eyes that so many parents object to. They don't want their boys to look like pro fighters and I don't blame them, but with this head-piece they won't have to worry."

LaFond thinks the fans will like it, too, because it will virtually guarantee that every bout will go the full distance. Too many matches have been interrupted by cut eyes i the first or second rounds, he believes, to suit the fans. It had to be done to protect the boys, but it left a sour taste in everybody's mouth, particularly when the better fighter had to re-tire.

La Salle Loses 1st To San Francisco

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—San Francisco University gunned to an early lead and then repelled re-peated challenges to dump a battling La Salle team from the unbeaten ranks, 31 to 45 in the second game of a Convention Hall basketball doubleheader tonight.

A crowd of 4324 saw a trio of substitutes spark a second half rally to give Temple a 70 to 59 victory over Rice Institute in the opener.

Reserves Win, 46-43

Orville Cunningham scored 22 points to lead the Naval Reserve basketball team to a 46-43 victory over the Crackerjacks last night at the Anacostia Naval Receiving Sta-tion gymnasium.

Kentucky, St. Louis Win; Meet Tonight

New Orleans, Dec. 29 (AP).—Ken-tucky's national collegiate cham-pions flattened Tulane, 78-47, in the Sugar Bowl basketball tourna-ment tonight and will meet St. Louis University in the finals of the four-team carnival tomorrow night.

All-America Ed MacCauley led St. Louis to a 61-52 victory over Holy Cross in the first game to-night, scoring 23 points. MacCau-ley played an aggressive defensive game, holding Holy Cross Center George Kaftan scoreless from the floor.

It was the sixth straight victory of the 1948 season for the unde-feated Billikens, winner of the Na-tional Invitational Tournament last spring.

Bowl Highlights To Be Televised On Sunday Night

Newsreel highlights of the three big Bowl games—Rose, Sugar and Orange—will be tele-vised here Sunday from 7 to 7:30 p. m.

WMAL-TV, Channel 7, is the local outlet for the show that will be carried on the entire Eastern network. Gillette, spon-sor of the radio broadcasts of the three games, has made ar-rangements to have the film flown to New York right after the games.

Biggest problem, of course, is getting the Rose Bowl pictures. A plane carrying them is sched-uled to leave Burbank, Calif., 6 p. m., Saturday and to arrive in New York, 6:50 a. m., Sunday.

A crew skilled in handling newsreel film will go to work at 7 a. m. Sunday to develop, cut and edit the three films. There won't be time to add a sound track so Sports Announcer Don Baker will give a running com-mentary describing the plays.

D. C. Plays for St. Louis

D. C. Wilcutt, flashy ace of the 1948 St. Louis U. five, is playing for the St. Louis Bombers in the Basketball Association of America.

Nichols Arrives; Toomay to Lakers

The newest Washington Cap is expected to land here about noon today and start preparations im-mediately for his local debut with the team on Saturday night against the Chicago Bears.

He's Jack Nichols, an object of the Caps' desire since he gradu-ated from the University of Wash-ington last spring, the second lead-ing scorer on the Coast

To make room for Nichols the Caps last night sold Jack Toomay to the Minneapolis Lakers for $1000.

Boudreau's Salary May Match Feller's

Cleveland, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Cleveland Plain Dealer said today that Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians is due for a new two or three-year contract with higher base pay and bigger attendance bonuses.

The paper, in a story under the by-line of Harry Jones, said:

"Provided the Indians draw ap-proximately the same number of people as they did last season, the 31-year-old pilot will receive be-tween $60,000 and $75,000, accord-ing to the reported terms under discussion.

"Boudreau next year is likely to make as much as Bob Feller, who is slated for a decrease in pay."

Boudreau, the American League's most valuable player in 1948, draws two salaries: one as manager of the world champion and the other as shortstop. At his home in Har-vey, Ill., he said:

"I expect to be in Cleveland January 18. I think Bill and I will discuss it further at that time."

The Plain Dealer's story con-tinued:

"Although the Tribe's pilot is still working under a two-year agreement signed last winter, Pres-ident Bill Veeck has indicated that he will tear up that document and replace it with one that is likely to elevate Boudreau into the high-est paid class of performers in baseball."

N. C. State Loses, 61-59

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—Loyo-la University put on a scrappy last-minute drive here tonight to eliminate North Carolina State, 61-59, from the Los Angeles Invi-tational College Basketball Tourna-ment. The game was a consolation affair. Loyola had been toppled by Hamline, 54-40, and the North Carolinans had been defeated by Wyoming, 41-39, last night.

Kansas Plays Oklahoma in Big 7 Finals

Kansas City, Dec. 29 (AP).—The powerful University of Oklahoma Sooners won the right to meet the clever Kansas Jay-hawks for the Big Seven Con-ference's tournament champion-ship by beating Iowa State 55 to 45 tonight.

Kansas City, Dec. 29 (AP).—Pro-tecting a 12-point halftime lead with a magnificent defense, the Kansas Jayhawks entered the championship finals of the Big Seven conference basketball tour-nament tonight by beating their bitter intra-State rival, Kansas State, 60 to 46.

In earlier games, Missouri and Colorado reached the consolation finals. Colorado defeated Harvard, 81-48, and Missouri on Ne-braska, 52-50.

Indian Totes Torch 225 Miles, Finishes With Double Hotfoot

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 29 (AP).—Pedro Paseno, a Tarahumara Indian runner, won a 225-mile race from Chihuahua City to Juarez, Mexico.

He carried a torch that touched off celebration of El Paso's Sun Carnival. Juarez is just across the border from El Paso.

Eight other Indians, members of the same tribe, fell by the wayside from exposure and ex-haustion. The tribe is noted for its feats of running.

Paseno covered the distance in 45 hours. His comment at the finish:

Coast Ball Improved

Tripucka Says Bears Should Play Wildcats to Standstill

Bloomfield, N. J., Dec. 29 (AP).—Notre Dame's top quarterback, Frenk Tripucka, said today that the underdog California football team should battle Northwestern to a standstill in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

Tripucka, who played against Northwestern early last season and then got a taste of West Coast foot-ball in the 14-14 Notre Dame-Southern California tie, com-mented that "Northwestern is no powerhouse."

"However," he added, "North-western does have a good strong team, something like the Illinois team that went to the Rose Bowl two years ago. The big difference is West Coast football is much bet-ter this year than it was when Illinois made the trip. It should be a good, even game."

Tripucka, home for the Christ-mas holidays, with his midsection still taped as a result of an injury he received in the Southern Cali-fornia game, said he thought that any team that can beat the Trojans in a traditional game, as Cali-fornia did, will stand up well against Northwestern.

He said he has not definitely made up his mind, but that he probably will play professional football now that his college eligibility is finished.

Tripucka has been drafted by both the Buffalo Bills of the All-America Conference and the Phila-delphia Eagles of the National Football League.

"Strangely," he said, "the Southern California game was not the toughest on the Notre Dame schedule. Purdue gave up the hardest going with Southern Cali-fornia next. The Northwestern game was right behind that.

"Many of the teams we met, such as Iowa, were way 'up' when they played us. People laughed at Coach Frank Leahy when he takes a pessimistic viewpoint of our games, but he knows how teams point for Notre Dame. Sometimes they're bound to catch us the way Southern California did."

Bryant 'Mum' On Skins' Job

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 29 (AP). Kentucky football Coach Paul Bryant declined today to com-ment on reports he was being considered as coach of the pro-fessional Washington Redskins.

"I am in no position to dis-cuss the situation," Bryant said.

Bowl Trips Are Annual Affairs for Georgia

Butts' Teams Take 6 Bids in 10 Years

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MIAMI BEACH, FLA., Dec. 29.—Football is a year around job for Georgia Coach Wally Butts and for the last four sea-sons it's become practically that for his players.

Butts and his Bulldogs are here in this winter wonderland preparing for their sixth bowl appearance and their fourth in a row. Only one other football team can make that statement—Alabama.

One of the few teams able to approach that phenomenal rec-ord is Georgia's Orange Bowl foe, Texas. When the Long-horns meet the Georgians Sat-urday, it will be the fourth time the eyes of Texas have been on the lads from Austin on a New Year's Day game.

When Butts was installed as head coach at Georgia 10 years ago, the Red and Black football fortunes were at a low ebb. A year before, former Notre Damer Harry Mehre was dis-missed in favor of Joel Hunt, who was signed to a two-year contract. Hunt was paid $9000 not to fulfill the second year of his pact.

Butts, who was Hunt's back-field coach, was named boss this time and Georgians are still cheering themselves over the selection.

When Butts took over the job in 1939, he said:

"I'M NO CHARACTER build-er. I'm here to win football games. If we happen to come up with a few characters on our football team, I won't object, but my principal job is to build a winning team."

Well, the little round man who two years before was a high school coach in Kentucky, wasn't an overnight success. His first two Georgia productions broke even in 20 games. In 1941, how-ever, the Bulldogs got going. They won nine and lost one and wound up in the Orange Bowl where they walloped TCU.

The next year, when a fellow named Frankie Sinkwich was a senior and another fair-to-mid-dling footballer called Charlie Trippi was a sophomore, the Bulldogs won 11 of their 12 games and spent New Year's Day in Pasadena, Calif., where they bumped UCLA.

Butts' overall coaching record shows 79 victories, 26 defeats and 4 stalemates. Nine of those 26 losses were sustained dur-ing war years and 10 during his first two years at Georgia.

How good is Butts? Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy, rec-ognized by fellow coaches as the "master," calls his fast friend "the best; the absolute best."

Citation, 'Fired', Runs Again in February, Says Jones

Champion's Operation Is 'Routine'

The affected area on the inside of the leg, covered about an inch square, said Dr. A. H. Davidson, Lexington, Ky., veterinarian who performed the operation at Hialeah Park.

"It was just a routine operation," Dr. Davison said. It consisted of inserting electrically heated needles under the skin and "blistering" the spot.

Dr. Davidson used a new cautery machine developed by D. M. Nicholson of Denver, Colo., who was on hand as an observer. Nicholson arrived here with Dr. Davidson by plane last night and they left for home after the operation.

Calumet General Manager Ben Jones and his son, Trainer H. A. (Jimmy) Jones, also watched the operation.

Ben Jones said Citation would be out of training several weeks but probably would have a couple of warm-up races in late February to prepare for the summer racing campaign.

Laurel Raceway Counters With Suit of Its Own

Laurel Raceway, which revived harness racing in Maryland last summer, eventually got around to answering a suit against it for $75,000 filed early this month by the company that erected its grandstand.

Yesterday in United States District Court in Baltimore, the Laurel Corporation asked that the suit be dismissed and filed a counterclaim against A. P. Williams Iron & Bronze Co., Inc., of New York, for $65,000.

Attorneys for the track declared that $76,000 of the $86,000 original contract price had been paid but that the Laurel Corporation refused to pay the balance, maintaining that the construction company had failed to live up to its agreement.

In its action, taken in the name of President Richard H. Hutchison, jr., Laurel said it had to pay $27,522.21 in overtime to other employes because the construction deadline on the grandstand had not been met. It also stated that it lost an estimated $35,000 in attendance and mutual handle income and still must pay approximately $10,000 to have the grandstand completed.

Laurel conducted its highly successful first meeting last summer from June 21 to July 19.

Longden Tops Own Record

Arcadia, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP).—Jockey Johnny Longden today established a new riding record as he booted home Count Victor in the third race at Santa Anita.

Longden's victory was his 317th during 1948. The pint-size millionaire saddlesmith set the record last year—316.

7 Redskins Here Form Court Team

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

SEVEN WASHINGTON Redskins, spending the gray months here, will try to keep the winter accumulation of suet down to a minimum with a little basketball.

But Washingtonians who love them so dearly in pads and helmets won't get much chance to watch the septet at basketball.

Even the mighty Caps don't draw well here and whether a team of stripped-down Redskins will is a question on which the boys aren't willing to risk any money. Perhaps, if conditions look favorable, they may schedule a few games in Turner's Arena.

A proposal whereby the boys would play the preliminary games to the Caps was quashed by Uline Arena officials who were committed to an Industrial League. Most games will be played on the road against like-minded huskies from nearby National Football League teams.

The 'Skins involved are Steve Bagarus, Al Demao, Tommy Mont, John Adams, Joe Tereshinski, John Koniszewski and Hugh Taylor.

Penn State Runners Due

Coach Charlie Werner is especially optimistic about his middle-distance second year men, Robert Parsons and Robert Freebairn, who are entered in the 1000-yard run at the National Guard Armory.

Werner thinks his sophomores can both shade 2:17, a mark that would have finished in the money in the last three years.

The Nittany Lions also boast a speedy hurdler in James Gehrdes who, in finishing second to Harrison Dillard in the K. of C. meet earlier this year, beat out Ed Dugger, the former Tufts star.

The mile event took a sudden turn for the better yesterday with the entry of Gerald Karver, a 4:11 man, and Browning Ross. Ross won the run last year in 4:13.7 after a drive from New Orleans which brought him to Washington just a few hours before starting time.

'Y' Handball All Set

With the completion of the semi-final round of doubles, the stage is all set for the handball department to put on its New Year's Day show in the big YMCA open house.

Sam Papandrew and John Mozur defeated John Rumin and Leo Fitzgerald, 21-17, 11-21, 21-4, to enter the final round along with Al Houlon and Sam Goldstein who eliminated Harry Schecter and Tom McNeil, 21-7, 21-13.

No Cinches In New Year Day Clashes

By Steve Snider

New York, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Every football team in a bowl game on New Year's Day has a great chance to win.

Picking the Big Nine representative in the Rose Bowl the last two years was an automatic gesture. Picking Northwestern (7-2) over California (10-0) in this year's pageant at Pasadena involved wrestling with conscience as well as statistics.

We'll string along with Northwestern, although the far West, for the first time since the Big Nine pact was signed, has the psychological advantage. Northwestern is the Big Nine's second best (to Michigan) and California, more than ever, will be fighting for Western prestige.

Despite defeats by Michigan and Notre Dame, Northwestern is a hard-hitting eleven with fast backs, clutch passing by Quarterback Don Burson and a slick offense lifted from the Cleveland Browns where Coach Bob Voigts resigned as a Cleveland assistant to take over at Northwestern.

SUGAR BOWL—North Carolina over Oklahoma, a hesitant choice. Oklahoma's furious attack led by Jack Mitchell and Darrell Royal can roll fast and often. North Carolina's defensive team, however, is stingy and should stand the gaff. Then there's Charley Justice and Hosea Rodgers to propel the offense.

ORANGE BOWL—Georgia over Texas. Perhaps the easiest choice of the lot and it's no cinch. Georgia Johnny Rauch is as dangerous a back as January 1 will see in action and the Bulldogs have a record edge on thrice-beaten, once-tied Texas.

COTTON BOWL — Southern Methodist over Oregon. A flyer on the Mustangs and Doak Walker, although Oregon is a real scrambler with an excellent passer in Norm Van Brocklin. Oregon lost only to Michigan (14 to 0) while SMU was licked by Missouri and tied by Texas Christian.

'GATOR BOWL—Missouri over Clemson. The records show Missouri always acquits itself nobly on New Year's Day—and never wins. However, Missouri looked like a fine ball club in fast company except for a mid-year shellacking by Oklahoma.

DELTA BOWL—William and Mary over Oklahoma A. and M. William and Mary was a personal jinx all year. The Indians lost when they should have won and won or tied when the pick was against them. We'll back 'em once more against an Aggie team that can rise to any occasion.

DIXIE BOWL—Wake Forest over Baylor. Going against the odds in another tough one. Baylor opearted in somewhat rougher territory, but Wake Forest has a pass catcher named Red O'Quinn who can do a lot of damage.

SUN BOWL—West Virginia over Texas Mines. A duel between Passer Jimmy Walthall of West Virginia and Miner Fred Wendt, a terrific ball carrier.

HARBOR BOWL—Vallanova over Nevada. Rates even but Villanova may be more solid than Nevada, which features Slingin' Stan Heath.

Embry Gets Embroiled

Colts Prexy Lists Six Reasons Why Team Isn't 'Weak Sister'

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—Simmering since a National Football League spokesman classified the Baltimore Colts of the rival loop as a weak sister, President R. C. Embry boiled over today with some facts of his own in rebuttal.

Discussing failure of the two leagues to get together, a NFL spokesman told the Associated Press in Philadelphia last week that "there is no way of strengthening by adding the weak." He called Baltimore and Buffalo "weak sisters."

1. The 18 businessmen behind the club include the presidents of the country's largest spice company and of four breweries, a department store owner, a hotel owner and three big contractors. The 200 stockholders range from the president of a railroad to stenographers.

2. The Colts have a 10-year lease on the Municipal Stadium.

3. Preseason ticket sales were second only to Cleveland in the All-America Conference.

4. The club was one of four in both leagues to experience attendance increases.

5. The average attendance (about 29,400) was fourth best in both leagues.

6. While a financial loss was suffered, the earnings were second best in the conference.

"Compared to other teams which mostly are operated by individuals we have the best overall strength in professional football except for Detroit," Embry claimed.

Embry, who also is president of the Baltimore Bullets profesisonal basketball team, said he wants everyone to know "we are ready to go again next year and expect to have one of the best football teams."

He said the Colts, reorganized the past year after being established in 1947, hoped to trim expenses to get into the black. He doesn't expect any real cutback in salaries until the leagues adopt a common draft but anticipates a squad reduction of three players might "save about $18,000."

Camellia Bowl Scheduled Today

Lafayette, La., Dec. 29 (AP).—Hardin-Simmons College of Abilene, Tex., will go after its second bowl victory in three starts here tomorrow when they meet the University of Wichita for the Camellia Bowl trophy.

A capacity crowd of 17,000 is expected to see the game, the climax of a three-day sports festival. The weatherman has predicted it will be fair and colder.

The Texans already have appeared in the Grape Bowl at Lodi, Calif., where they tied College of Pacific 35-35 on December 11, and in the Shrine Bowl at Little Rock, Ark., where they defeated Ouachita College 40-12.

Lions Lose, 5-0, to Reds; Crowdis Stars

Providence, R. I., Dec. 29.—The Rhode Island Reds defeated the Washington Lions, 5 to 0, here tonight, before a crowd of 4081 who applauded the work of Lou Crowdis, spare Washington goalie.

Despite the five goals scored against him, one in the first period, three in the second and another in the third, Crowdis played a brilliant game; filling in for the injured Paul Gauthier. Crowdis had a total of 42 stops, most of them difficult.

Eddie Kullman gave the Reds the lead in the tenth minute of the first period on assists from Ray LaPlante and Chuck Scherza. Halfway through the second, LaPlante was credited with the second Providenec goal as the puck bounced past Crowdis off Phil McAtee's knee.

The third Providence goal came in the fifteenth minute as the result of a fine shot by Roger Bedard. Jack Stoddard was credited with the fourth Providence goal, just before the end of the period when the puck bounced from his arm off Crowdis' arm and into the cage. The Washington goalie protested bitterly, but futilely.

Johnny Chad converted Billy Arcan's rebound half way through the third period for the fifth Providence goal.

Operating Net Of D. C. Hotel Firm Mounts

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Properties, Inc., yesterday reported net operating income of $576,129 for the fiscal year ended October 31, compared with $547,631 in the previous 12 months. The net was after provision for income taxes, but before depreciation charges.

Weakly

President Frank E. Weakly pointed out the corporation spent $191,542 for property replacements and additions during the year, compared with $66,597 in 1947.

Gross income amounted to $4,185,865, a gain of $85,605 over the previous year. "The increase in gross," Weakly said, "is primarily from room and apartment revenue, although occupancy is less than it was a year ago. The improvement in dollar income is due to increased rates. Beverage sales are again slightly under those of the previous year."

Weakly added that payments aggregating $312,500 have been made on first mortgage bonds. An additional $60,482 has been earned for principal curtail and will be paid in January so that "the overall debt retirement out of earnings for this fiscal year will amount to $372,982—an increase of $18,524 over last year."

The corporation, now in its seventeenth year, operates the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels, the apartment house at 2700 Connecticut ave. and an office building at 1001 Vermont ave.

Balance sheet showed total assets of $9,685,072, with current assets of $1,445,294.

Weakly said that the company is contesting an Internal Revenue agent's claim for additional Federal income and excess profits tax of $1,014,593 for the three years ended 1944.

Postoffice Explains New Rates For Jan. 1

Air Postage and Special Delivery Increases Among Numerous Changes

Washington postoffices reported yesterday they were flooded with phone calls about the complicated increases in postage rates which become effective January 1. Here is how the postoffice explained the new rates:

The penny postcard rate and the 3 cents per ounce rate for regular first class letters remain unchanged.

There is no Federal Diary today because of Columnist Jerry Klutz's illness. He expects to resume the column Friday.

An air postcard will be inaugurated. The charge will be 4 cents.

Air mail postage will be 6 cents an ounce or fraction thereof, on letters and small parcels weighing up to and including 8 ounces. (Heretofore, it has been 5 cents.) Articles weighing over 8 ounces will continue subject to air parcel post zone rates which went into effect September 1.

Third class mail will require a minimum of 3 cents per piece if it is more than 9 inches in width or 12 inches in length, or if it is less than 3 inches in width and 4 inches in length.

Other third class mail will require a minimum of 2 cents for the first 2 ounces and 1 cent for each additional ounce up to and including 8 ounces.

As a result of these third class rate changes, average size greeting cards in unsealed envelopes will require at least 2 cents instead of 1½ cents postage. However, very small greeting cards, now mailed at the rate of 1½ cents in unsealed envelopes, will require at least 3 cents postage. (Smaller missives are harder to handle, it is explained.)

Special delivery rates will be increased from 13 cents to 15 cents, plus regular postage, on first class letters up to 2 pounds; 25 cents, from 2 to 10 pounds, 35 cents, over 10 pounds.

On second, third and fourth-class mail, special delivery rates, in addition to regular postage, will be: 25 cents for mail up to 2 pounds; 35 cents, 2 to 10 pounds; and 45 cents, over 10 pounds.

Information about other rate increases, the Postoffice announced, may be obtained at local postoffices. These affect parcel-post rates, book rates, special handling, money orders, postal notes, registered and C.O.D. fees.

Young Mother, Polio Victim, Loses 5-Week Fight for Life

Despite efforts of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis and specialists from three States, Mrs. Merlyn Stratman, 25, of 9620 Sligo Creek pkwy, Silver Spring, died of bulbar poliomyelitis yesterday in Gallinger Hospital.

The Maryland mother of two girls was stricken on Thanksgiving eve with the disease which paralyzes the lungs and brain, and makes it impossible for a victim to breathe or swallow.

On December 1, special inhalation equipment was flown from St. Louis. The polio foundation had located the equipment, developed during the Minnesota polio epidemic of 1946, in response to an urgent request by Dr. Lewis K. Sweet, chief medical officer in pediatrics at Gallinger.

The new equipment, used for the first time in Washington, is a special high-concentrate inhaler, which provides 100 per cent pure oxygen.

Mrs. Stratman spent the last five weeks of her life in an iron lung, taking food intravenously and receiving oxygen through a tube in her throat. She lost consciousness for a few days but rallied and remained conscious until a few hours before her death. Doctors reported she fought for life "like a Trojan" throughout her illness.

Mrs. Stratman's death was the eighth due to polio this year in the greater Washington area, out of 268 cases reported.

The daughter of the late Dr. Winston Rieves Haynes of Silver Spring, the polio victim is survived by her husband, John J. Stratman, 28, an employe of the Kane Transfer Co.; two daughters, Carol Ann, 3, and Patricia Lee, 2, her mother, Mrs. Lena B. Haynes, 9504 Garwood st., Silver Spring; her grandmother, Mrs. Josie R. Haynes of the same address; a brother, W. Lawrence Haynes, Silver Spring, and a sister, Joyce W. Haynes of the Garwood st. address.

'Eve' Revelry Prices Here Hold Steady

City Spots Offer What Patron Got Last Year, With Little Cost Change

New Year's Eve revelers will pay about the same price to welcome in 1949 as they paid to say hello to 1948 in Washington's hotels and night clubs.

A spot survey yesterday showed that prices will vary little this year from those of a year ago, and the patron will get about the same things he got last year for his money.

Most of the hotels and clubs have announced a heavy rush on reservations and have warned, as in other years, that they may not be able to take care of last-minute patrons.

For those who wish to spend the evening more quietly and less expensively, many Washington theaters will open their doors for midnight shows.

A few of the hotels will require formal dress for the occasion, but most of the places have announced that dress will be optional.

Dress will be formal at the Wardman Park Hotel's New Continental Ballroom, where the cost will be $5.85 a person, including tax. The price includes dancing from 10 p.m., breakfast at 1 a.m. and favors and noisemakers.

Dress will also be formal at the Shoreham Hotel's Blue Room, where a couple may celebrate at $12 a person, including tax. This will include dinner, favors, entertainment and dancing. The Shoreham's Palladium Room, where dress will be optional, will charge $3 a person and will offer dancing and favors.

The Carlton Hotel's Congo Room will cost $5 a person, plus tax. There will be dancing from 8 p. m., noisemakers and favors.

$4 Price at Statler

A cover charge of $4 a person, plus tax, is the price for celebrating in the Statler's Embassy Room, where there will be dancing and noisemakers.

The usual cover charge of $2.50 a person will be charged in the Lounge of the Mayflower Hotel, which will offer entertainment, dancing and favors.

The Raleigh Hotel's Pall Mall Room will charge $6.50 a person, plus tax, and will offer supper as well as entertainment and noisemakers. Without supper, the evening will cost $3 a person, plus tax.

The Lounge Riviera of the Hotel 2400 will offer noisemakers, favors and dancing with a cover charge of $4.20 a person, including tax.

At the Hamilton Hotel's Rainbow Room it will be $5.50 a person, plus tax. This will include dancing, breakfast and noisemakers.

Both the Annapolis and the Ambassador Hotels are offering entertainment and noisemakers with no cover charge or minimum for the evening.

A six-course dinner, favors, souvenirs and dancing will be $7 a person at the Madrillon Restaurant. For $6.60 a person, the Casino Royal will offer dinner and a floor show as well as dancing.

The price for celebrating at the Lotus Restaurant will be $6.50 a person and will include dinner, a floor show and favors. At the Club Cairo it will be $8 a person for dinner, entertainment, dancing and favors.

The Balalaika Restaurant will include dinner, entertainment, dancing and favors for $7.50 a person, plus tax.

The Club Kavakos will have dancing, a big floor show and favors for $2.50 a person.

Coroner's Jury Holds Taxi Death An Accident

Verdict Exonerates Male Companion of Woman Who Fell From Moving Cab

D. C. traffic deaths to date, 1948.67
Deaths this date last year.....71
Total traffic deaths, 1947.....72

The death of Mrs. Grace Olive Lerch, 25-year-old waitress, fatally injured when she fell from a moving taxicab November 16, was the result of an accident, a coroner's jury ruled yesterday.

The verdict exonerated George Skarvonnes, 30, a claims inspector in the General Accounting Office, who lives at 1867 Mintwood pl. nw., and who was with her in the cab when the accident occurred.

As a result of the jury's decision, the Police Accident Investigation Unit has listed Mrs. Lerch's death as a traffic fatality, bringing the total for this year to 67 as compared to 71 this time last year.

The accident occurred about 10:30 p. m. in the 2400 block of Calvert st. nw., when Mrs. Lerch apparently opened the left rear door of the taxicab and fell out.

Had Been Drinking Previously

Skarvonnes, who said she had been living with him at 1925 Biltmore st. nw., testified they had been drinking during the evening before they got the cab to go home.

He said they were cut off from drinking in two restaurants at Macomb st. and Wisconsin ave. nw. When they left the second restaurant, Mrs. Lerch fell to the pavement and he had to help her up and into the cab, he said.

During the cab ride, he dozed off, Skarvonnes said. He said he did not know how the back door was opened, but he suddenly looked over to her side of the seat and had a "vague picture" of her going out the door.

The driver of the cab, Clifford Crawford, 23, of 200 11th st. se., said he heard a "click" and when he looked back over his left shoulder he saw Mrs. Lerch with her right hand on the handle of the door. The door was open about 9 inches, he said.

Crawford testified he glanced forward as he slowed down the cab immediately, but when he looked back again in a matter of seconds, she had already fallen through the door. He said Skarvonnes was sitting back in the right hand corner of the rear seat.

Died of Fractured Skull

Both Skarvonnes and Crawford said they rushed back to where she was lying in the street and found her unconscious and bleeding from the mouth and ears. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital, where she died the next day of a fractured skull.

Skarvonnes said there had been no arguments between him and Mrs. Lerch during the evening. The cab driver also testified the couple had not argued and that he heard no scuffle or struggle in the rear seat before she fell out the door.

At another inquest yesterday, the coroner's jury exonerated Navy Comdr. Robert A. Haynie, 53, of 8711 2d ave., Silver Spring, Md., in the traffic death of George H. Brown, 48, a handyman, of 139 Grant ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Brown was injured December 20 when he was struck by a car, operated by Commander Haynie in the 5300 block of 16th st. nw. He was admitted to Garfield Hospital with a fractured right leg and a fractured skull and died there Christmas Day. The jury ruled that he had been responsible for his own death.

Kreisler Gives Nation Brahms Manuscript

By Paul Hume

One of these, the original copy of Johannes Brahms' violin concerto, is one of the world's great compositions. Written in 1878, it was played the following year by Joseph Joachim, celebrated virtuoso of his day. It is one of the works by which every aspiring star of the violin must be tried.

Kreisler, who announced last week that he was planning to sell a number of his rare books and medeival manuscripts for charity, withdrew the Brahms manuscript from public auction and gave it to the Library of Congress, saying he felt it should be available to the public rather than in private hands.

The Brahms concerto was a favorite with Kreisler audiences, and his recording of it, made with the London Philharmonic Orchestra 15 years ago, has remained a best-seller ever since.

The famous violinist, who will be 74 on February 2, also gave the library the manuscript of Ernest Chausson's Poem for violin and orchestra.

Chausson, a pupil of Cesar Franck, was killed at the age of 44 while riding a bicycle in a Parisian suburb. The manuscript of his poem was given to Kreisler by the noted Belgian violinist Eugene Ysaye, to whom Chausson dedicated the score. Kreisler inclosed with the Chausson manuscript the letter he received from Ysaye in 1931 when Ysaye gave him the score.

The Poem has been heard in Washington several times during the past year. Jan Tomasow, concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra, played it in concert, and it has also been heard as the accompaniment for "Lilac Garden," a ballet in the repertoire of Ballet Theater. It will be heard over a coast-to-coast CBS network next Sunday afternoon, when it is played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Charles Munch, with Ginette Neveu as soloist.

Through the generosity of Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall, the Library of Congress owns several other important Brahms manuscripts, including the Third Symphony and the Song of Destiny. Kreisler said that he paid $10,000 for the manuscript of the concerto. Experts agree that it would be worth several times that amount today.

Gun Missing In Shooting After Party

Police yesterday were trying to fathom the mystery of what happened to the Italian-made pistol that wounded Herbert Broyhill, 27, building contractor, while he was riding in an automobile.

Broyhill, who lives at 1650 N. Greenbrier st., Arlington, appeared early yesterday at George Washington University. A bullet had wounded his left hand and then lodged in his left leg.

With him was a friend, Ernest E. Byrd, an employe of the National Institute of Commerce and Technology, 1332 New York ave. nw.

Police said both told the same story, that they had attended a party where they borrowed the pistol and some ammunition. While they were in the vicinity of 9th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., they told police, Broyhill tried the ammunition for size and the pistol was accidentally discharged, wounding Broyhill.

But what happened to the pistol and ammunition? Neither knew, police said. Police searched the auto in which the two men were riding and the vicinity of the shooting but found no weapon, no ammunition.

Broyhill was reported in good condition.

Key Bridge Northbound Lanes Closed Today

Two northbound lanes over Key Bridge will be closed for about 10 hours starting at 7:30 a. m. today to traffic entering the District, H. R. Howser, District bridge director, announced last night.

He said the temporary closing was ordered to permit workers to pour 400 cubic feet of cement on the bridge approaches from the new K st. overpass. One lane will remain open to allow a limited flow of incoming traffic, he added.

The northbound curb lane on the bridge was to have been closed yesterday, but weather held up the work.

Friday Is Deadline For Business Licenses

Deadline for obtaining $10 business licenses is 5:45 p. m. Friday at the District Building, Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson reminded Washington businessmen last night.

He said every corporation doing business within the District, regardless of its gross income, must purchase a license.

Crews Completing Repair Jobs on 2 Water Mains

Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission emergency crews were expected to complete repairs today on two water mains in the Takoma Park, Md., area which broke yesterday morning.

Approximately 40 homes were affected by the breaks, sanitary commission employes said. They were caused by the recent freezing and thawing weather.

One main was on Carroll ave. between Lincoln and Flower aves. in Montgomery County and the other was at Ray rd. and Gude ave. in Prince Georges County.

Carroll ave. service had been restored last night. The Ray rd. main was expected to be back in service by early today.

Industrial Home School to Have New Year's Party

The children at the Industrial Home School, 2433 Wisconsin ave. nw., will be treated to a New Year's party at 8 tonight by the Women's Argo B'nai B'rith.

There will be entertainment by teen-agers, souvenir hats and horns and refreshments for some 125 children at the home proper and for another 35 from the annex, where 69 youngsters are waiting for placement in foster homes.

The party is part of the organization's participation in the Justice Department's juvenile delinquency program.

5 Sentenced In Inspection Sticker Theft

Jail sentences were meted out to five more Alexandrians yesterday as city and State police continued efforts to locate 20 Virginia automobile inspection stickers stolen recently from an Alexandria garage.

The five, who police said were implicated in the theft, were sentenced to terms ranging from five to ten days.

They were:

Benjamin Peterson, 28, a laborer, of Manassas, Va., sentenced to 10 days in jail and fined $25 for theft of inspection stickers.

Laden Yancey, 28, a laborer, 610 S. St. Asaph st., Alexandria, 10 days and $25 fine for possession of stolen inspection stickers.

George Witherspoon, 36, a mechanic, of 613 N. Patrick st., Alexandria; John H. Brown, 25, clerk, 525 N. Alfred st., Alexandria, and George Randall, 39, a laborer, 929 N. Patrick st., Alexandria, all sentenced to five days in jail and fined $25 for possession of stolen stickers.

Police Court officials said Peterson was given the 10-day term after he admitted stealing the stickers from a garage where he was employed. Yancey drew a similar sentence after testimony that he filled out fradulent receipts for inspection certificates which were distributed to the other men.

Theft of 20 inspection stickers was bared Tuesday after a truck driver was arrested on a traffic charge and police checked his inspection sticker. A check on serial numbers uncovered the sticker theft.

Highest-Priced Parade Seats Are Sold Out

But Ticket Chairman John F. Morrissey emphasized last night that more than 20,000 of the bleacher variety in the $2.50, $3 and $4 price range are still available to the public.

For example, there are $2.50 seats in Stand No. 19 which is located on the north side of Pennsylvania ave. between 7th and 8th sts.

Holders of the highest-priced seats will watch the show in the White House block on the Lafayette sq. side of the avenue. They will face the stand from which the President and his guests will review the parade.

The seats selling for $2 will be on the south side of Pennsylvania ave., between 9th and 11th sts., and on both sides of Constitution ave. at 1st st.

In further details on Inaugural Ball trimmings, it was announced yesterday that a loudspeaker system for calling chauffeur-driven cars will be provided and a canopy will extend from the Armory entrance to the loading zone.

Due to a District safety regulation, the Inaugural Committee said invitations to the ball have been limited to 5300 persons. Invitations already have been sent to all members of Congress, State Governors and their wives. And bachelors in these categories, it was added, may bring a lady friend.

Famed Missouri Mules Will Parade, After All

Lamar, Mo., Dec. 29 (U.P.)—President Truman's birthplace will be represented in the inaugural parade, after all. It was announced today that space had been found for Lamar's blue-ribbon mules. Washington officials earlier had said there would be no room for the animals. A letter pointing out that Mr. Truman was born in Lamar, where his father was a mule buyer, may have turned the trick. Owner Claude Adams has been advised to bring on his mules.

Congressman's Aide Fined $20 In Va. Tax Case

The secretary to a Texas Congressman was fined $20 in Arlington County Court yesterday on charges of failing to file a Virginia State income tax return and of failing to respond to a summons.

The defendant, Mrs. Stella Merrill, 2005 Key blvd., Arlington, secretary to Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.), said she would appeal the fine to Arlington Circuit Court. She maintained she was entitled to exemption on basis of her status as secretary to a Congressman.

She agreed in court, however, to file her Arlington personal property tax returns.

Earlier, Representative Gossett had interceded in person with the Arlington commissioner of revenue's office, which had issued the summons, on behalf of his secretary, but with no results.

Officials in the commissioner's office said United States Congressmen residing in Arlington are given a "courtesy" exemption from the State income tax, since they are regarded as "temporary sojourners," but the officials added that the exemption "definitely does not extend to their employes."

On December 22, W. T. McKinnon of 1523 S. King st., had challenged the right of the State to tax him on grounds that his legal residence is in South Carolina, but was fined $50 and costs.

Policeman Faces Conduct Charge After Testimony

Pvt. Edward A. Raymond of the Eighth Precinct will face a Police Trial Board Friday on a charge of conduct prejudicial to the good order of the department, it was announced yesterday.

The charge arises from testimony given by Raymond before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that a man he arrested on a drunk charge last month may not have been drunk.

As a result of his testimony, Churchill's Grill and Bar, 3709 Macomb st. nw., was cleared of three charges of violating liquor laws.

Judge Orders Sex Offender To Gallinger

A 49-year-old restaurant counterman with four convictions for sex offenses was taken off probation yesterday and ordered committed to Gallinger Hospital for examination as a possible sex psychopath.

The man is Robert T. Howard, 38, no known address, who was on a year's probation for soliciting prostitution here last September. A condition of the probation, it was said, was to accept treatment from a private physician, but Judge George D. Neilson was informed that Howard stopped the treatment.

Howard has been convicted of sodomy, soliciting prostitution and indecent assault since 1935, according to Assistant United States Attorney Robert Scott. Judge Neilson ordered the commitment under the District's sex law.

Three Women Injured in Car Accidents

Three women were injured in two accidents on Mount Vernon hwy., one involving four automobiles, yesterday at almost the same time.

The four-car smashup occurred, United States Park Police said, after an automobile operated by Edward T. Kalbus, 32, of 1123 11th st. nw., became stalled for lack of gasoline near Slater la.

Three other cars collided in telescope fashion with Kalbus', they said.

Charlotte Henderson, 42, 310 N. View rd., Alexandria, driver of the third automobile, was admitted to Alexandria Hospital with undetermined injuries, and Dorothy N. Langbourne, 35, of 220 N. Royal st., Alexandria, driver of the fourth, was treated there for minor abrasions.

Kalbus Was Pushing

Kalbus, who was pushing his vehicle, and the other driver, James Strother, 22, a Marine from Quantico, Va., were uninjured, police said.

In the other Mount Vernon blvd. accident, Miss Nancy L. Keane, 26, of 2311 Connecticut ave. nw., was admitted to Alexandria Hospital with undetermined injuries after the car in which she was riding jumped a center parking strip, struck a 30-inch pole and rolled 25 feet before landing on its top. The accident occurred near the north entrance to the National Airport.

Miss Keane and the driver, Miss Kathleen Feely, 25, of 4221 Argyle ter. nw., secretary to the treasurer of Georgetown University, were assisted from the wrecked vehicle by a passerby. Miss Freely was uninjured.

Others Injured

Rupert E. Young, 63, of 1512 Irving st. ne., was injured when his automobile was struck by a pickup truck at 13th and Franklin sts. ne. Young was admitted to Casualty Hospital in an undetermined condition with cerebral concussion.

William H. Schrom, jr., 50, of Greenbelt, Md., driver of the truck, was charged with passing a stop sign.

In another two-car collision George L. Willard, 26, of 3405 15th st. se., was injured when his car was struck by one driven by John L. Buchall, 19, of Andrews Air Base, at Military hwy. and Forestville rd. He was admitted to Casualty with a possible fractured hip.

Struck while running across 7th st. nw. at Pennsylvania ave., Joseph Trent, 26, of 324 Dixon ct. sw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital in critical condition. Driver of the striking car, police said, was Richard C. Carter, 23, of 3510 A st. se.

Dr. Bibby, Pioneer in Fluorine Use, Honored Here

Tooth Pastes of Future May Contain Decay Preventive

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Fluorine in toothpastes is now being studied as a future household preventive of tooth decay, it was reported here yesterday by Dr. Basil G. Bibby, pioneer in the chemical's use in dentistry.

Moreover, said Dr. Bibby, there is every reason to believe fluorine toothpastes will prove as effective as present topical (patted on) applications of sodium fluoride now almost standard procedure by practicing dentists.

In Washington to receive the annual Achievement Award of the Alpha Omega Fraternity, Dr. Bibby further reported preliminary surveys continue to show that fluorine treatments are as beneficial to adults as to children.

In all age groups studied, he said, the treatments caused reduction of from 40 to 50 per cent in tooth decay that could normally have been expected without it during the same periods.

Since most of the tests were conducted on children, Dr. Bibby explained, "too many persons have assumed" that it was ineffective on adult teeth. Moreover, he added, the "majority" of dental troubles in adults originate from gum diseases, "making tooth decay in adults less and less of a problem."

Declaring flatly that sodium fluoride has proved itself to be "the best tooth decay preventive known," he belittled reports that a solution of potassium ferrocyanide and zinc chloride is serving the same purpose with twice the efficiency. He said he referred to the experiments conducted by Dr. Bernhard Gottlieb at Baylor University.

Asked to elaborate further on the possibilities of fluorine toothpastes, Dr. Bibby said he was "not at liberty" to give details, but that the studies are being conducted by several groups, representing both academic and commercial interests.

Present pure food and drug laws, he said, prohibit the commercial use of fluorine in toothpastes because the chemical element is poisonous. Such danger, he said, does not extend to the small amounts that would be needed in compounding the new toothpastes.

"I am certain," declared Dr. Bibby, "that when clinical tests prove fluorine toothpastes can prevent tooth decay, the administrators of the law will be more than willing to lift the restriction."

Dr. Bibby, director of the Eastman Dental Research Laboratory, Rochester, N. Y., and former dean of Tufts Dental College, was presented the dental fraternity's annual award at a banquet in his honor last night at Hotel Shoreham. Guest speaker was Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

Senator McGrath told the 300 assembled dentists and their guests that the rulers of Russia believe communism and democracy "must inevtably clash in a death struggle from which only one will survive." Consequently, he said, this Nation's efforts to prevent the spread of want and misery are not just the acts of do-gooders, but are acts of self-preservation aimed at defeating the objectives of communism.

Alpha Omega Fraternity, it was announced at last night's banquet, was yesterday awarded the Certificate of Merit aof the Joint Distribution Committee, American agency aiding distressed Jews overseas, for "outstanding efforts to alleviate the dental crisis suffered by Europe's Jewish survivors since the end of the war.

1360 Checks Sent, 48,437 Yet to Go

The checks run from 15 cents to $3.

The court obtained the money involved—totaling $51,240.23—after Facts Magazine in 1945 began contesting a fraud order by which the Postmaster General closed out the puzzlefest sponsored by that publication.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff granted an injunction that put aside the fraud order, but an appeal was taken by the Postoffice. Finally, the postmaster was upheld in March of this year by the Supreme Court and the fraud order was reinstated.

The Supreme Court action necessitated redistribution of money to the entrants in the contest, entitled "Hall of Fame." The money had been held in trust pending outcome of the court action.

Thus far, 1360 checks have been sent out. About 2500 a month will be mailed until all funds are accounted for, court officials said. The court is charging a 1 per cent poundage fee on each sum mailed.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 30 Years, Mother of Five Children Thinks Daily of Her First Love, a Man Now Nearing 70; She Yearns to See Him Again

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem of mine goes back 35 years, and I have promised myself to do whatever you advise.

When I was 17 I fell in love with a man twice my age. I'll call him Jim. He was wealthy, worldly, fascinating and, so far as I in my youth could discern, decent and sincere.

He had never married and although he was very fond of me, he didn't want to marry me, simply because he wasn't in love with me then. He never told me this outright, but after three heart-breaking years of waiting, hoping and realizing that he was seeing less and less of me, I started going with boys nearer my own age.

Friend's Report Stirs Nostalgia

TWO YEARS LATER, at 22, I married. Now I have five children and a husband who dearly loves me, but not for a day in 35 years, from the very first day I met Jim, have I forgotten my first love for a minute.

Some time ago a mutual friend ran into Jim and when she asked if he were married, he replied, "No; Helen (that's me) was the only girl I ever loved or wanted to marry, but I lost my chance."

Now I am not seeking an affair or courting complications, but I would like to see Jim again and talk over the old days. He is not far from 70 and sometimes I think if I don't see and talk to him once more I will never be satisfied. Very sincerely I ask your advice and shall be watching your column for it. H. C.

She Is Yearning to Empty Altar

DEAR H. C.: It's nice to hear that Jim didn't tarnish your honor in addition to breaking your heart with callous finesse when he was 34 and you 17; and possibly from his viewpoint that was being decent indeed; or maybe, being worldly-wise, he was simply playing safe—keeping out of line of a shotgun wedding or comparable unwelcome denouement.

But as for your being the only girl he ever loved or wanted to marry, fiddlesticks! If he has ever imagined he entertained that sentiment, the fancy dawned after he learned you were happily established with an adoring husband and producing babies hand-over-fist. The thought of you in the Madonna-role might quicken nostalgia in him; but even so, the twinge of longing would refer to infantile bliss personally experienced in his own little bassinet, around the year 1879, with his mother hovering o'er.

Further, the fine glow he feels, if and when he thinks back specifically to his romantic fling with you, is warmed-over self love, which has reference (1) to your rapt adolescent worship of him at the time, and (2) the "clean" figure he hopes he cut in easing out without leaving indelible "heel" tracks.

His Talk of Love Is Sounding Brass

YES, looking back he feels pretty good, one way and another, about that idyll, and it happens to be one he can mention in company when in a mood to reminisce; due to the fact that you picked yourself up and went on to a solid marriage, showing no surface scars of damage inflicted by him, and therefore (on the record) aren't a reproach to his conscience.

When he speaks of love, he is as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. So in heaven's name don't lose your head, again, over his idle gallantry to the mutual friend, which was, after all, merely his vain graceful way of saying, "No, I'm not married; but of course we both remember how crazy Helen was for me."

Properly, you shouldn't wangle for a visit with him; but with your husband's consent a poke at ashes of the past should do no harm. So ask him if he could live through dinner at home with the old beau some evening soon, provided you can reach Mr. Big by phone and get him over. Tell him the brainstorm was sparked by your friend's reported encounter, and if he doesn't mind, then try your luck. But if he objects, forget the idea. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

There are no families in today's sort of world that don't run into problems that stump them. This may seem to be a pretty sweeping statement, but it's true.

When life was simpler, a family could meet its problems effectively without turning elsewhere for help. That day has passed. Today, the intelligent thing to do when one doesn't know how to deal with a problem is to talk it through with someone who can help.

Let's suppose that mother is constantly irritated by one of the children. She begins to realize that there may be something she doesn't understand in her own attitude that is part of the trouble. Or perhaps another youngster feels much inferior to brothers and sisters. One can ignore such things, of course, and hope that they will take care of themselves. But we are seeing more and more what lasting effects they may have unless they are understood and taken care of.

In the community there may be a teacher who has deep human understanding and can help us think through and feel through such problems. Most of the family service agencies have qualified workers in their counseling service. Conscientious parents will put aside false pride and turn for help to such understanding people.

How to Mask Unpleasant Odor

What can I do to get rid of the terrible odor in some of my shoes, and how can I prevent it from getting in my new shoes? I have used a special powder to no avail. T. L. M.

Pepsin powder is effective in removing perspiration odors, from clothing, so it might be worth while trying on your shoes. First, sponge the shoes out with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added. Sprinkle powdered pepsin (obtainable at some drug stores) liberally inside the shoes. Let remain from one to two hours, moistening it occasionally. Then let the powder dry, brush it out thoroughly, wipe out the shoes with a damp cloth and dry in the sun. If the trouble persists, I would suggest you discuss the condition which causes the odor with your doctor.

Would you print a good recipe for a white cake? Every one I have tried has been a flop. What is it that I'm doing wrong? My measurements are level and I used the right temperature, also time the baking. T. L. M.

Old-Fashioned White Cake.

3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other fat
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon flavoring
1 cup milk
4 egg whites (½ cup)

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter until soft and smooth. Gradually add sugar, beating until light and fluffy; add flavoring. Add flour alternately with milk, beating until smooth after each addition. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry; gently fold into cake batter. Turn into 2 prepared 8 or 9 inch layer pans 1½ inches high. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 25 to 30 minutes.

In following this recipe, be sure that the fat is room temperature before starting to cream it and then cream with sugar until very light and fluffy. This helps to start dissolve the sugar, which is necessary for a light, fine textured cake. You haven't given enough information for me to be any more specific in my suggestions. If, after trying this recipe, you still are having trouble, tell me how the cake looked and I'll be glad to try to help you.

How can I clean a white bathing suit before storing it for the winter? It is acetate cotton and elastic and partly lined with wool. The inside of the suit is all elastic, with the exception of the wool part. The suit still has a grayish cast despite frequent washing. T. M. E.

The most you can do safely to clean this combination of materials is to wash it in a mild soap and lukewarm water. Rinse several times and dry thoroughly before storing.

Virginia Warner Bows At Sulgrave Club Ball

MISS VIRGINIA CRENSHAW WARNER, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Warner, jr., made her debut last evening at a ball given by her parents at the Sulgrave Club.

The debutante, now a freshman at Bryn Mawr, was graduated from the National Cathedral School last June. An excellent sportswoman, Miss Warner also edited the school paper and was chosen Queen of the May in last spring's ceremony.

For her party last night, she wore a white nylon marquisette frock with off-shoulder neckline and side-draped skirt. A single white orchid was tucked into her dark hair and she wore a triple strand of pearls.

Miss Bettie Marshall Warner, home from Wellesley for the holidays, was her sister's only assistant, wearing a turquoise satin and net frock caught up in the back with deep red satin bows, which matched the flowers in her hair. Mrs. Warner's gown was blue lace and she had pinned white camellias to her shoulder.

Sidney and his men played for dancing and in the oval drawing room an accordionist entertained couples "sitting this one out."

Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Childs entertained at dinner before the dance for their daughter, Miss Malissa Childs, who will be presented to society on Saturday.

Guests included Miss Margaret Waller, Miss Julia Snowden, Miss Mary Louchheim, Miss Agnes Devereux, Miss Jean Powell, Miss Harriet Lowry, Miss Betty Jeanne Harrell. Also Colt de Wolf, Bradford de Wolf, James McHugh, jr., Michael McHugh, Elwin Frend, Yardley Buckman, Henry Strong, Thomas Owen, Gordon Wholley and Prentiss Childs, son of the hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. Abbot Paige Mills also gave a dinner party before the dance, entertaining at the Chevy Chase Club for their daughter, Clara Paige Mills.

In the group of young people were Miss Barbara Barry, Miss Dore Martin, Miss Elizabeth Beach, Miss Louise Hoover, Miss Patricia Mulligan, Miss Anne Mackall, Miss Betsy Mary de Sibour, Miss Adrian Dunn, Miss Eugenia Chase, Miss Georgianna Glenn, Miss Eleanor Bishop, Miss Louise Houghteling, Miss Sherrard Marthinson, Miss Jan Marthinson, Miss Jacqueline Appel, Miss Sylvia Shafroth, Miss Benair Mills and Mrs. Richard Chatfield Taylor.

The young men included Leroy Morgan, Stephen Shafroth, Frank Addison, Huntington Block, Robert Lovett, Duncan Chaplin, Chester Flather jr., Robert Griffin, Ashbel Green, Peter Hill, Duer McClanahan, Alexander McClanahan, Halbert Sloat, Lanier Stone, Peter Sturdevant, Peter Kirby, Paul Shorb, Parker Oliphant, Philip Israel, John Yates, Garrison Ellis, William Thomas, Sherwood Webster, Terence O'Brien, Sonny Young, Elijah Titus and Alexander Trowbridge.

Belated Yule Invitation Received From Overseas, Offers Tips on Tipping

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TRICKLING late from Paris comes former Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Bill Foster's Christmas card. It's a formal engraved invitation which, at first, proceeds conventionally: "Mr. William Chapman Foster (then in small letters) Deputy Special Representative for the Economic Administration (then big letters) request the honour of the company of this department at a Telepathic cocktail party on December 25, 1948, at 12 noon, your time 6 p. m. Paris. Joyeux Noel." On the reverse, the Fosters, who sign themselves "B. & B." (Beulah and Bill) scribbled a helpful assortment of holiday suggestions, all of them alcoholic!

Nevada's Senator George Malone and his effervescent Katie are rushing round the world with the fury of a typhoon. From Calcutta comes a postcard depicting a very fancy Jain Temple, on the back a confused message which runs somewhat as follows:

"Hello darling—Remember this place? We're having a wonderful trip—out about 5½ weeks now. Home about January 15-18—Delhi today, after four days here, we'll stop with the Hendersons there four days—see the Taj one afternoon and moonlight, then Cairo, South Africa, South America, Spain, Portugal and home. Hope you have a Merrie Christmas and come have a drink when we've reached home. Much love."

As far as we know, there's never been a Jain Temple in our life. But we can imagine nothing more exhilarating than exploring its jigsaw crannies, its marble whatnots with the Malones!

WOMEN who do unusual things, either important or trivial, are always interesting. On Beacon Hill Christmas Eve we were captivated by the bands of bell ringers. So Christmas night we cornered Mrs. Arthur Shurcliff, this country's No. 1 campanologist, in her Mount Vernon st. home. Lately she's been featured, pictorially, in holiday issues of half a dozen national magazines.

HER FATHER, the late Dr. A. H. Nichols, used to chime the bells in the Old North Church, where Paul Revere once ordered the famous lantern-hanging stint. Dr. Nichols started his daughter off just as soon as she was able to pull a rope. Growing more adept, she took to practicing long hours in the Advent Chapel until neighbors, disturbed by constant clamor, complained. So her father whisked her off to England, where bell-ringing is still a popular pastime and where tower bells are properly chimed, not merely pulled as they are sometimes in this musically benighted country land. This was all back at the century's turn and the then Miss Nichols created a minor sensation by being the first woman to ring a peal.

RINGING A PEAL takes around three hours' steady work, since, pulling with other ringers, the 5040 possible combinations on a set of bells must all be rung. After her return home Mrs. Shurcliff, finding it difficult to chime tower bells persistently, began to ring hand bells. Friends, amateur bell ringers, became interested and she formed several bands (usually five ringers. The are became popular and today 12 bands have formed themselves into the New England Guild of Bell Ringers. They have annual get-togethers and are in demand all over the country. Hand bell ringers hold a bell in each, have suitable tunes specially adapted.

Mrs. Shurcliff owns a set of 29 different bells which range over 2½ chromatic scales. The bells, incidentally, have leather handles, clappers muffled with either felt or cowhide. Recently, British bell-ringing experts popped into Boston, turned the local tinklers vert with envy because they somehow managed to play with TWO bells in each hand. Among Mrs. Shurcliff's fanciest feats was tolling the bells in Boston King's Chapel during Queen Victoria's funeral.

THOUGH BELL ringing isn't well known in these parts, there are so many fans in England that a weekly magazine called "The Ringing World" details their complicated activities. The issue after little Prince Charles' birth was a fascinator. The first peal rung to celebrate his birth was in British Columbia, quickly followed by an Australian peal. All in all some 156 peals (all lasting over three hours) were rung in England within 24 hours of the happy event, so you can imagine the state of British eardrums the ensuing day. This total of 156 peals was exceeded only by a joyful clangor of 162 rung up after Princess Elizabeth's wedding.

Present Trend In Government Stirs Warning

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The right to vote was strictly limited and other democratic procedures lacking, but the lace-collared gentry of revolutionary Virginia did a good job of governing, a Duke University professor told members of the American Historical Association yesterday.

The educator, Dr. Charles S. Sydnor, pointed out that eighteenth century Virginians had little belief in the fitness of most men to hold office and, consequently, usually only the ablest and morally outstanding achieved political distinction. Many of those elected were plantation owners who had business and administrative experience running their large establishments, he said.

In "shunning aristocratic notions," the United States has become "perilously close to forgetting fundamental ideas that superior intelligence and virtue are needed in office," Sydnor warned.

"Let us beware lest respect for democracy degenerate into veneration for a particular set of democratic procedures," he said.

Liberal Tendencies

The speaker declared that despite their aristocratic heritage of birth and breeding, eighteenth century Virginia leaders showed liberal tendencies, humanizing the criminal code, improving the lot of the "underprivileged" and "generally" supporting the revolution. He listed Jefferson, Madison and Monroe as among the "liberals."

At another of the 15 separate sessions held yesterday, Herbert Marcuse, of the State Department's Office of Intelligence Research, cited contradictions in Marxian-Socialist theory.

"On the one hand, Marx said a Socialist society is supposed to be ever better able to satisfy all human needs and that uninterrupted production and toil" is needed to achieve this, Marcuse stated.

"In this aspect, a Socialist society seems a super-capitalist society based on toil, production and technological progress," the speaker asserted.

Less Toil, More Leisure

But, on the other hand, he declared, " a Socialist society is supposed to be a negation of capitalist society" and based not on a lengthening of the work day but a shortening of it, on not more toil but more leisure.

Marcuse observed that Marxians attempt to "explain this away" by contending that the period of intensive toil is only a transitory stage leading to increased leisure and wealth for all.

Speaking at the same session, David Bernstein, editor of Science and Society, declared that Marx's concept of history starts with the thought that men play a large part in making their own history but that economic conditions is the decisive factor.

Owen Lattimore of Johns Hopkins University, speaking before another group, declared that "Asia is now out of control."

Open-Door Policy Cited

"The Anglo-American open-door doctrine marked the first phase of transition from a Far East under control to a Far East out of control, and from rivalry between similar competitors to rivalry between competitors dissimilar from each other and hostile to each other in ideology, social and political structure and economic operation," Lattimore asserted.

Terming the open-door doctrine "the stop-Russia doctrine of its day," the speaker said: "As the most permanent anti-Russian of the maritime powers, Japan was essential to the working of the open-door system." But, he explained, once Japan's foot was in the "open door," she steadily expanded her interests in China to the exclusion of other powers.

Earlier the group heard Walter Lippmann, political analyst, warn America against dissipating its powers over too many individual areas throughout the world.

The Beveridge $1000 history fellowship was presented at a dinner of the association last night to Dr. Donald Fleming, 315 Hillmoor dr., Silver Spring, Md.

The award was for Fleming's manuscript, "John William Draper and the Religion of Science." Dr. Fleming is currently engaged here in research into the history of science. In September, 1949, he will return to Brown University as assistant professor of history.

D. C. Woman Asks Divorce From Iranian

She is Mrs. Helen Jeffreys Bakhtiar, of 4506 Harrison st. nw. The husband is Dr. Abol G. Bakhtiar, described as a leading surgeon of Iran.

According to the suit, Mrs. Bakhtiar married him in New York City in 1927 and went with him to Iran in 1931. She said that they had seven children, who are now between 10 and 19 years of age and all of whom reside in this country.

The suit, filed by Attorney James F. Reilly, states that Dr. Bakhtiar forced his wife to leave his Iran home in 1944 and that she then came back to this country. The suit also states that Dr. Bakhtiar is questioning the validity of the Iran divorce.

"You know," Reilly told reporters, "all a husband in Iran has to do is to say: 'I divorce thee' three times and he's a free man."

Mrs. Bakhtiar asks for custody of the children but no alimony.

Sex Charge Bond Set At $25,000

Tonker, who lives at 701 6th st. sw., was held under $25,000 bond for grand jury action on a charge of violating the District's sex law.

The children are a girl, 7, and a boy, 9.

The girl took the witness stand before Judge George D. Neilson but appeared frightened. She said she had "talked" to her stepfather in his bedroom Tuesday but gave no more information.

The mother, Mrs. Myrtle E. Padgett, 38, said that the father of the children died last year, and that she had been living with Tonker for four months.

Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short announced in court the Government would present at least two cases against Tonker to the grand jury.

War Brides Granted Time

New York, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Immigration authorities said today they will admit 37 war brides and one war bridegroom en route here by plane, despite expiration of the Alien War Brides Act last midnight.

Authorities said these arrivals are the last of 52,000 servicemen's dependents admitted under the law since it was enacted in 1945.

Immigration Commissioner Watson B. Miller said authorities will be "as generous as possible in the spirit of Christmas" toward soldiers' wives who were on their way here when the law expired. He said each case would be decided "on its merits."

The missing plane with 32 persons aboard left San Juan, Puerto Rico, late Monday night en route to Miami. It was last heard at 4:13 a. m. (EST) Tuesday. A faint radio message, picked up by a New Orleans station, said the plane was then about 50 miles south of Miami.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Senator McKellar Wins In Startling Display Of Public Power

Senator Kenneth McKellar's pugilistic record now shows two decisions over newspapermen.

Newspapermen can't punch a nickel's worth, except at a typewriter. When the Tennessee Terror whips Ezzard Charles, or some other good boy, I'll admit he's ready for faster company.

I might even back him against Errol Flynn, or some other top-notch nightclub battler.

McKellar's victories remind me of the days when Primo Carnera was knocking off one tank artist after another. Like da Preem, McKellar doesn't hurt anybody, but he keeps winning those decisions anyhow.

It's not unusual for a man of 79 to want to spend his days puttering around the garden—provided he doesn't mean Madison Square Garden

Next thing you know, somebody will be suggesting a TVA project for Jacobs Beach.

After escaping unscathed from his fights, McKellar remarked: "I can't understand how I get into these affairs."

CHRISTMAS ECHOES

I suppose it'll be quite a while before I catch up with all the Christmas sidelights, but many of them are worth waiting for.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, the District's Engineer Commissioner, tells a good story on himself.

General and Mrs. Young were at a pre-Christmas party at the Turkish Embassy and Mrs. Young decided that she'd like a glass of the champagne that everybody was drinking.

So the general made his way through the crowd in front of the bar, and put in his request. But the butler behind the bar shook his head, and in doleful British accents said:

"I'm sorry, sir, but all the big brass was ahead of you."

It was almost Christmas Eve, and the crew at the Number 2 motor vehicle inspection station (615 10th st. sw.) was trying to clean up its work and go home.

Then they noticed two forlorn young boys loitering about. They were not only poorly dressed—one of the lads was even barefoot.

Questioning revealed that he had a pair of shoes at home, but they were no longer wearable. His mother and father were ill, some of the children had to stay indoors because they didn't have winter clothing, and the whole family was just about destitute.

It was Christmas Eve—and time to hurry home to their families. But the boys at Number 2 knew they had other work to do first.

They dug down in their pockets, and organized their tasks with the efficiency of modern Santas.

When they were finished, it was a much brighter Christmas for donors and recipients alike. Here's what the inspectors rounded up:

New shoes, sox, underwear and caps for each boy; a 13-pound ham for Christmas dinner; a large basket of canned goods and fresh vegetables donated by the Children's Aid Society; a Christmas tree, complete with toys and decorations, furnished by the firemen at Engine Company 13—and even brand new haircuts for all the kids.

Then, on the Monday after Christmas, the inspectors went back to the humdrum of being growled at by motorists who were kept waiting, and owners whose cars failed to pass inspection.

The wife of the head of a big Federal agency tells me that she responded to a knock on her door the morning before Christmas and found herself confronted by a big strapping fellow dressed in work clothes.

As the door opened, he broke into a wide grin, removed his hat with the sweeping manner of a gentleman of the old school, and then slyly inquired:

"Does Santa Claus have anything for the garbageman?"

She probably wasn't over 40, but you couldn't be sure.

The story of poignant sorrow was deeply etched in the lines of her face; her clothes were the shapeless vestments of a woman for whom time has lost its meaning.

She was at the jewelry counter, looking at a small necklace, and the clerk was saying, "That one is $20."

"Twenty dollars," she echoed softly. "That's a good deal of money, isn't it?"

"Well—yes," agreed the clerk awkwardly.

"Twenty dollars," said the woman again. "But then—it's just what she always wanted. I wonder if I have that much . . ." She began fumbling in her purse.

"Of course," said the clerk during the painful interlude, "it does seem a pity to spend so much money for a child's necklace. She'll outgrow it in no time, you know."

The woman looked up from her purse and with soft, infinite patience explained.

"No, she'll never outgrow it. You see . . . she died yesterday."

NEW YORK.—The news reports of Faye Emerson Roosevelt's cut wrist stated that the wound was self-inflicted, and that her husband restrained her from further injuries. Their friends doubt that this was a real suicide attempt, because Miss Emerson is one of the strongest women in show business. Only two weeks ago, at a party, she did an acrobatic stunt in which she held and then tossed her 200-pound husband over her head.

Sam Goldwyn tells of the day he visited Oxford University during the war. The Dean of Balliol took him to tea, and an artist for the London Observer sketched his picture. Then the public relations man for Oxford University said: "Mr. Goldwyn, would you please give me one Goldwynism to go with this sketch of you?" . . . Mr. Goldwyn re-edited an old Goldwynism, and obliged with: "When it comes to Oxford, include me in" . . . The Observer front-paged it, and ignored Goldwyn's report on economic conditions.

The Freedom Train's locomotive, the Spirit of 1776, has been sold to a railroad which will take possession only after the tour is ended. Its run will be through Springfield, Ill. . . . Robert J. Landry will be the editor of Space & Time, the advertising weekly . . . The employes at Alexander's department store won $250 betting that the fourth child of George Farkas, president of the store and one of the owners of the New York Giants football team, would be a fourth boy.

Director O'Brien of the Freedom Train said yesterday that in taking the train to every section of the country he learned that Americans are heterogeneous, that their looks do not indicate what part of the country they come from. "This was made quite clear to me when the train reached Rutland, Vt.," said O'Brien. "We were welcomed by the Yankee Mayor of Rutland, who held out his hand and in a rich Georgia voice drawled: "As Ma'r of this heah city, Oh'm shuh glad to waylcome yoh-all."

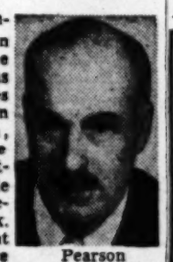
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. Had Notice of Indonesia War

By Drew Pearson

Inside fact about the Indonesian War is that the United States received ample advance notice it was coming.



Pearson

Merle Cochran, American member of the United Nations Good Offices Committee in Indonesia, warned the State Department by cable one month before the attack. He reported that the Dutch were piling up supplies—most of them made in America—preparing to wipe up the Indonesian Republic, even while United Nation mediators were trying to settle the dispute.

Cochran queried the Dutch regarding their activity, but got waved aside with the bland reply that the Dutch Army was preparing for "routine maneuvers."

But possibly because of his inquiries, Dutch representatives in Washington were more frank. They informed both the State Department and the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff that Communists had permeated the Indonesian Republic and were planning a revolt in February.

If this revolt was successful the Communists would use Java and Sumatra as a base to take over British Malaya, Borneo and the Philippines. Therefore, concluded the Dutch, they planned to take "police measures" in advance.

It so happens that the registered Communist vote in Holland itself at the last election was 10 per cent, and United States observers say that the Communist percentage in Indonesia is less.

However, United States reaction was mixed. The State Department, which hitherto has coddled the Dutch, began to get alarmed. Certain United States military men, on the other hand, in effect winked. "Police action," they indicated to the Dutch, was an internal problem of no concern to the United States.

Conflict between the United States military and the State Department is, of course, nothing new. And the above illustrates what has happened to United States foreign policy time and again ever since President Truman took office. In Germany, in China, in Argentina and in Spain, the President has let the military influence, sometimes dominate, his foreign policy.

Immediately after the Dutch attacked, the State Department, belatedly wide awake, drafted a strong note to the Netherlands. It was just as strong as the Australian statement at the United Nations.

When the note was sent to the White House, however, the President toned it down. Again the military were suspected.

But even in its revised form, the American protest put the Dutch almost in the same category as the Hitlers and Mussolinis in their wrecking of the League of Nations. It also brought howls of private anguish from the Dutch.

Last week, Dutch representatives called on United States officials again. They were up in arms over curtailment of Marshall Plan aid to Indonesia—even though this slap on the wrist sounds much louder than it hurts.

Nevertheless, the Dutch were irate. Without attempting to quote them direct, the gist of what they said was this:

We don't understand your policy. You spend five and a half billions to fight communism in Europe, yet in the Far East you support communism. We wouldn't be in the Western European Pact if you hadn't asked us to get in. We could have been neutral in the last war, and we could be neutral in the next. We don't want to have our country overrun by the Russians as it was by Hitler.

We realize that this Western European Pact is largely for the defense of the United States and that we are essential to it. So if the United States is going to cut off Marshall Plan aid because of Indonesia, we might begin warming up to the Russians. We don't want to but we may have to.

So far it doesn't look as if the President is going to be scared by Dutch threats. Mr. Truman may make mistakes, but the last thing he does is scare easy. He's much more likely to get his backbone up.

Furthermore the State Department is convinced that Dutch tactics in Indonesia are likely to foment communism rather than block it. The Indonesian Republic represents middle-of-the-road natives who don't want communism any more than the Dutch.

During the United Nations mediation, the Dutch were so high-handed that United States Mediator Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, got fed up and went home. He was replaced by Coert duBois, who protested to the State Department that he didn't want the assignment because he had been Consul General in Batavia and was pro-Dutch. Shortly after duBois took over the U. N. assignment, however, his sympathies were all with the Indonesian Republic.

Running Away

The nightly dream that I endure . . . Is not my only one . . . For I have many others while . . . I walk beneath the sun . . . Indeed sometimes they interfere . . . With what I ought to do . . . And very likely that is why . . . So few of them come true . . . But I am constantly intent . . . On reaching for a star . . . And running from the things of life . . . The way they really are . . . I do not like . . . A morbid mood . . . Or any sign of wrath . . . And I am always miserable . . . When shadows cross my path . . . And so I go on dreaming and . . . Pretending I have fun . . . Although of course I know that I . . . Am getting nothing done.
